Color Me High School

Each year a new crop of nervous, excited freshmen enter Mt. Lebanon High School. By dressing alike, listening to the same music, and joining the same activities, freshmen usually try to conform to the standards of peers. As their high school careers continue, however, many find a niche — with the baseball team or perhaps with student council. Their personalities take on color, in effect, as high school is, no doubt, a time when people begin to find themselves.

While students may enter high school without color, a shade of gray, they leave in full color. Students evolve, taking on different styles and attitudes, and, after a while, they specialize as they begin to excel in academics or organizations. Thus, each student begins to paint a picture of who he or she is. Some become green and brown environmentalists; others, full of school spirit, bleed blue and gold. Still others, who wish to sample everything high school has to offer, develop themselves as a broad spectrum of colors. Whatever the color, each person contributes to a brilliant multicolored mural called "Color Me High School."

What Color Reflects You?

Many students walk to school under gray, cloudy skies. When the bell rings at 3:03, they emerge into the sunshine, colored by the day's experiences.

Leaving Entrance 4 on a warm autumn afternoon, students head for the parking lot. Just as the leaves on trees begin to turn colors, days at Mt. Lebanon High School color the lives of freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors.

What did you like best about Kurt Angle's assembly?

"The soundtrack for the first video was great."

Meghan Bragdon

"The fact that Kurt Angle decided to come to our school is an honor."

Mike Turian

"The video at the end of the assembly — muscles, muscles, muscles!"

Emily Fasulo

"The assembly motivated me to change my practice methods and work ethic."

To welcome home its Olympic gold medalist, Mt. Lebanon throws a parade for Kurt Angle. Cruising Washington Road in a vintage car, Kurt is congratulated by fans.

Mr. Graf looks on proudly as yearbook editors Andrea Bookman and Julie Downs interview the Olympic champion.

Red, White, Blue & Gold

Color Kurt Angle red, white, blue, and gold. A freestyle wrestler, Kurt wears his gold medal proudly. When Kurt, a 1987 graduate of Mt. Lebanon High School, became an Olympic champion, the entire Mt. Lebanon community showed its support with a congratulatory parade in uptown Mt. Lebanon. Two months later, on October 18, Kurt Angle came to the high school and shared his philosophy on life and winning.

While attending Mt. Lebanon High School, Kurt excelled at both football and wrestling. In addition, he was a popular guy, elected by his fellow students to Homecoming Court. He decided to pursue an Olympic gold medal after watching Bruce Jenner compete in 1984. When his father tragically passed away during his sophomore year, Kurt vowed to dedicate his gold medal to his father.

While attending Clarion University, Kurt suffered a career threatening knee injury, making him realize that wrestling may not support his future endeavors. It was then that he altered his attitude toward academics, bringing up his grade point average from a 2.0 to a 3.8.

After college, Kurt pursued his wrestling goals with rigor. In preparation for the Olympics, Kurt became totally focused, putting forth unlimited effort and dedication to win. Kurt's daily regimen of five to seven hour workouts helped him gain the winning edge. "I've faced opponents with more talent than I," Kurt explains. "The difference is that I was more prepared."

Extremely proud of his accomplishments, Kurt Angle urges students to pursue their dreams. Kurt reminds us that in the beginning, "There wasn't money involved, and there wasn't fame. I was a kid with a dream." Kurt's advice for Mt. Lebanon students is sound and sincere. Do not rely on athletics because someday you'll need something more. Work hard in and out of the classroom because mental and physical fitness go hand in hand. It's fine to look up to sports figures and movie stars, but Kurt says, "The real role models are the ones who want you to do well. Your coaches, teachers, and family — that's your team."

As for the future, Kurt's new dream is to become an actor. Winning the gold medal has opened doors for Kurt. He's taking acting classes and has several projects in the works, including a film contract and a television show. Just as he hopes Mt. Lebanon students will, Kurt Angle is following a dream, his golden opportunity.

Patriotic and proud, the Kapron family joins other Mt. Lebanon residents in cheering our hometown hero.

Golden Memories

The summer of 1996 will be remembered for the Atlanta Centennial Olympic Games. While a few students travelled to Atlanta to watch Olympic events or to work in the Olympic Village, most remained in Mt. Lebanon watching The Games on television. Students gathered at friends' houses and excitedly cheered for their favorite athletes. The '96 games were the highlighted by U.S. women's teams: gymnastics, swimming, and basketball. Who will ever forget the fortitude of Kerri Strug when she vaulted a second time despite her ankle injury?

A beautiful view of Olympic Stadium shows off the Atlanta Braves' new playing field.

The Olympic torch, carried across the country before the Games, shines brightly in Olympic Stadium, a gold beacon for the medal hopefuls.

Staged in Savannah, Georgia, the sailing competition evokes beauty as sailboats from each country line up at the start of a race.

Atlanta in all its glorious colors welcome visitors and athletes from around the world to the Centennial Olympic Games.

With the Olympic torch and rings as their backdrop, freshman Victoria Misutka and her sister Colette pause to enjoy the spirit of the Games.

What was your favorite Olympic event?

Tim Lyon

"Equestrian."
Tim Walsh

"Gymnastics."
Krissy Yablonsky

"Probably wrestling."
Andy Bianco

Peaceful before the tragic bombing, visitors enjoy the fountains in Centennial Olympic Park. During the Games, a bomb damaged the park, injuring many people and killing one.

Holding an Olympic torch, Beth Powell and her sister Melissa stand atop a gold medalists' podium.

Red Hot Summer

Summer gives everyone a much needed break from the rigors of schoolwork. Mt. Lebanon students, however, are not idle. Many summer experiences color students' futures by providing opportunities to gain experience and branch out. These experiences include work, travel, study, and exploratory visits to colleges and universities.

This group of outdoorsmen take a break from camping and canoeing on the Algonquin.

Freshmen Alexi Pankas and Lauren Drapala enjoy the sights in New York City, including this view from the Statue of Liberty.

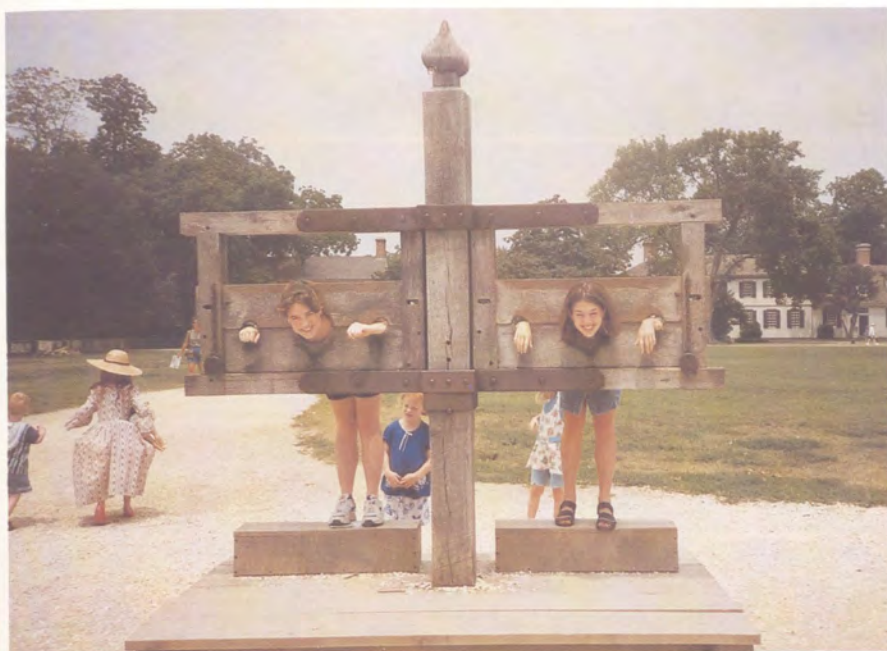

Dressed for winter, juniors Donnie Carson and Katherine Stabenow roam the chilly Swiss Alps during their summer trip with the German Club trip to Germany and Switzerland.

A Student Ambassador to South Africa, Julie Bennett visits with children from townships. She also met government officials and toured historical sights.

Experiencing the punishment of the stocks, Mary Pat and Maggie Manzo sympathize with the early colonists of Williamsburg.

What did you do this summer?

"I went to Cape Cod."
Hannah Rennhoff

"I went to Emma Kaufmann Camp."
Rachel Singer

"A bunch of us went to volleyball camp at Penn State."
John Krugh

"I went to Andrew's

While studying in London, Andrea Bookman spends time sightseeing at Buckingham Palace and watching the Changing of the Guard.

Student Life: Not Just Parties

Life is a party, or is it? STUDENT LIFE at Mt. Lebanon High School is definitely more than just weekend parties. Though Mt. Lebanon students often bring a party atmosphere to Friday night football games, at other times, they pursue serious activities to enhance their lives.

Flashes of blue and gold brilliance streak the field as players, cheerleaders, and band members perform for rowdy fans at every Friday night football game. Later, we swing our support to other sports including basketball, a sport which enjoys an intense Lebo following. Beyond Lebo's turf, our sports fanaticism spills over to the Penguins and the Steelers. Black and Gold Spirit Days give the students a chance to wear their allegiance on their sleeves.

All this fun has its price, though. To fund our social lives, we enjoy the privileges of working at hot stores such as the Gap or popular hangouts such as TCBY. These jobs also provide time to make new friends as well as to gain individuality and responsibility.

School sponsored, formal events, such as dances and the Senior Boat Ride, occur throughout the year. For these anticipated events, some of us prepare for months, finding the perfect clothes and planning tirelessly. Before dances, we traditionally head to fine Pittsburgh restaurants and afterwards to the homes of good friends. Making the most of an evening is important to the Mt. Lebanon excitement seeker.

Although at first blush a party may seem like a fun time, we at Mt. Lebanon have so much more than a party life making up our STUDENT LIFE.

"I think
STUDENT LIFE
is what you want to make it. You can find whatever kind
of life you want
here."
Rachel Friede

Homecoming King Cory Bluemling and Homecoming Queen Jen Rabbitt ride in a brand new convertible. Meanwhile the Court parades around the track in Geo Trackers. The 1996 Homecoming Court included Katie Beardsley, Greg Conklin, Kate Hooton, Bob Scott, Heather Cross, Eric Lantzman, Brooke Nuckles, Idris Evans, and Laura Neal.

How did you enjoy the Homecoming Parade?

"The cars were nice. They really made the parade enjoyable."

Jen Bunch

"Homecoming Parade is a really good way to get people psyched for the game."

John Buschek

"I thought the parade was too long. I only came for the game."

Kirk Wilson

"The senior class had a lot of spirit. It was very impressive."

Susannah Maurer

For the first time, Mt. Lebanon seniors elected two Homecoming Kings. Unable to march in the parade, King Tom Buczynski smiles while taking time out from the game.

Purple Majesties

The Class of '97 executive council, cheered by Heather McCormick and Sara Cunningham, bring the most spirit into the parade.

Held on Friday, October 3, the Homecoming Parade provided excitement for everyone in attendance. This year, however, crowds saw history as Mt. Lebanon seniors selected two Homecoming Kings for the first time ever: Cory Bluemling and Tom Buczynski. They were crowned along with Queen Jen Rabbitt. Carrying large banners with class colors, the executive councils marched around the track. Each class evoked spirited cheers from their fellow freshmen, sophomores, juniors, or seniors.

Keeping a tradition, the Triple Trio sings the Star-Spangled Banner.

The sophomore executive council show the spirit of '99.

Making their presence known, the freshmen lead the executive councils in the parade. While parading, freshman student leaders discover how to get initiated into the fun of Homecoming spirit!

The student council presidents call the names of the Homecoming Court, who then file onto the field. Everyone anxiously awaits the announcement of the King and Queen.

Pumpkin Hallways

Mt. Lebanon High School's tradition of door decorating continued this year as senior homerooms devised new ways to outdo each other in hopes of winning a pizza party. The winning homeroom, 12-12, concocted a dragon's lair. Working for hours, the dedicated group turned the library into a cave, complete with stalactites and a huge, fire-breathing dragon. While 12-12 feasted on their pizza prize, other homerooms enjoyed donut holes for participation.

Erica Friedman explores 12-15's sunken treasure.

Julie Gimbrone and Adelynn Giran proudly show off their pumpkin patch display.

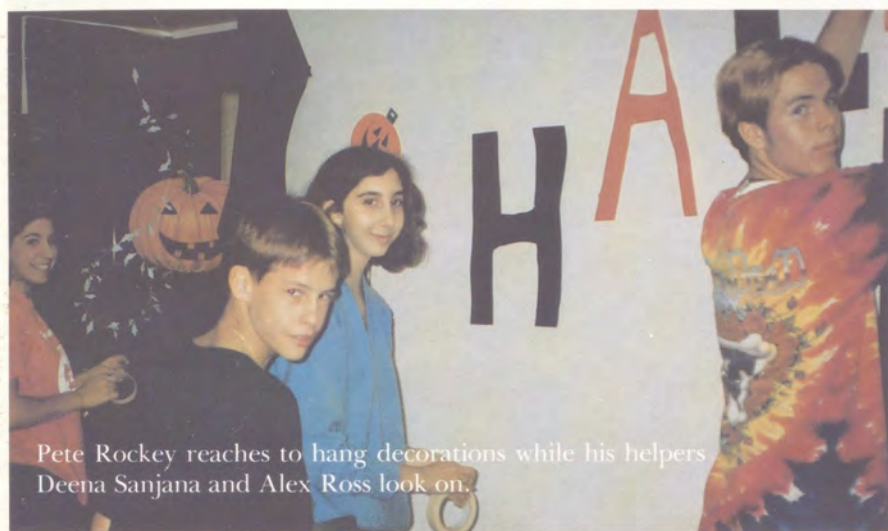

The winning homeroom, 12-21, renders a fire-breathing dragon in his lair, constructed outside of the library. Checking out books has never been so scary.

Diane Goettel and Christine Gleason create a spooky scene on their homeroom's door.

Dan Schwarz poses outside Mr. Canning's homeroom, whose inside joke "Come see my goat!" kept students and teachers puzzled all day.

Pete Rockey reaches to hang decorations while his helpers Deena Sanjana and Alex Ross look on.

What makes door decorating unforgettable?

"Being the one who is responsible for getting everyone here at 7:00."
Abby Altschul

"Our homeroom finally got unified and excited for once."
Chip Gregg

"For three years our homeroom did nothing. This year at 6:45 AM, we all put real effort in."
Kira Baum

"I almost fell off a ladder."
Jonathon Jeffries

These proud sophomores stand before the pumpkin they created in the hallway.

Tracie Citron, Lesley Hutton, Alexa Paton, and Katie Palcho pause before returning downstairs.

The boat ride provided great dancing music as well as time to chill. These seniors, Nick Androsky, Brian Arth, and Dan DaCosta, take advantage of the boat ride atmosphere to hang out with friends.

Why was the Boat Ride enjoyable?

"The Boat Ride was fun because our whole class was together for the first time as seniors."

Liz Kennon

"The Boat Ride was a great time for our class to bond in a non-academic atmosphere."

Heather McCormick

"The Boat Ride was relaxing and fun."

Damon Bricker

"The Boat Ride was fun because we had great music."

Justin Kelly

The beginning of the dancing, which continued all night, was started as a few bold girls stepped onto the floor. These senior friends start getting into the music.

Dan Kost and Rick Wright break loose as they become enticed by the music.

No Senior Blues!

As part of an annual tradition, the Class of 1997 went on their Senior Boat Ride. The night began with groups of friends having dinner together. The Party Liner and the Gateway Clipper provided a D.J. and a dance floor. This seemed to be all the seniors needed for a good time. From the time the boat left the dock to the time it returned, the seniors danced to classic dance songs like "Grease" and even more modern ones like "The Macarena." The seniors had had their turn to party on the water with their class.

After a Coke break, Kate Hooton and Aimee Harper pause before rejoining their friends.

From the balcony above, cameras catch the seniors dancing with wild abandon as they try to fit on the crowded dance floor.

As seen from the balcony, Saran Linn and Heather McCormick groove in the small space they can get on the crowded dance floor.

Matt Henkel poses with Mrs. "Groucho" Joseph.

Farmer girl Alexa Paton along with Mike Sasano, dressed as a can of Snapple, know that because tonight is Halloween, they don't need one of Mrs. Zappa's candy quizzes.

How do you feel about our school spirit?

"This school needs a lot more spirit."

—Greg Campbell

"In a school with so many different people, a spirit day gives people the chance to have something in common for a day. I just love spirit days."

—Ibie Adeyeye

"Although interesting, spirit days are pretty strange."

—Jason Lawson

Malte Motullo, excited about his first American Halloween, gives the camera a thumbs-up in the middle of journalism class.

Genie, a.k.a. Melissa Cole, enchants Lebo students with her smile, hoping she won't have to return to her lamp.

Go Nittany Lions! Tim Banks, disguised as the Penn State mascot, shows his spirit for both Mt. Lebanon and Penn State.

Halloween: Not Just Orange and Black

Vivid colors blazed through the high school hallways on October 31, 1996, when students and teachers demonstrated spirit by dressing-up for Halloween. This year's costumes included a huge stuffed animal, a gypsy, a soldier, the Blues Brothers, and several ghosts. The $10 prize-winning costume was a caveman outfit which totally disguised Mrs. Schreiner. In the same day, Mt. Lebanon High showed its school spirit and its creativity.

Jessica Anderson, dressed as a dog, poses in Center Court before school.

Dressed as a JV cheerleader, Aaron Mascaro wishes he had taken time to brush his hair this morning.

Brianne Hicks and Kathryn Alger sit mesmerized by the bonfire.

How do these events show our school spirit?

"The bonfire is a tradition. It shows that everyone can come together and get along for the good of school spirit."

—Lisa Blumenschein

"Dressing weird shows school spirit, because not a lot of people are willing to dress like this."

—serf Andrea Mechenbier

"The plethora of enthusiasm displayed at the Bonfire and Serf Day showed students' penchant for school spirit."

—Mike Beck

Banana Seth Rodriguez searches his lunch bag to see if he packed anything that looks quite like he does.

Guilia Calla proudly proclaims that her master is Ibie Adeyeye, who forced Guilia to wear a huge wig and to drag a stuffed bear around school.

So many of the seniors are dressed as serfs, it looks as though serf costumes are trendy. The serfs compare costumes in Center Court.

Fun by Firelight

On Monday, October 28, many people probably asked, "What is wrong with that senior?" In keeping the tradition of Serf Day, seniors raffled themselves to be enslaved for a day. Serf Day tasks included wearing embarrassing, humorous costumes as well as singing or dancing in the cafeteria.

The Bonfire, held the previous week, provided the students a chance to go to Bird Park, cheer for the football team in their quest to beat Upper St. Clair, and listen to the announcement of serfs and masters. Bonfire/Serf Day raises funds as well as school spirit.

Nick Androsky gives Becca Citron and Sandra Telep tips on leather and leopard-print gear.

These seniors can only laugh upon finding out who their masters are. They have fun guessing what their serf duties will be.

As the fire burns brightly, students gather around for warmth and to hear the announcement of the serfs and masters.

Spirited Colors

This year, the pep rally started with an awesome performance by the band and the drum line. Afterwards, the athletes in fall sports marched in by teams to be recognized.

The festivities continued with a tug-of-war.

The students beat the faculty. Then, came the fun of the jello eating contest. For the second consecutive year, Senior Mike Carey was pronounced champion! Lebo students and athletes had fun showing support for each other.

The tug-of-war provides amusement for participants and spectators. Coach Haering served as the starting judge.

Tony Androsky struggles to be the first competitor to finish his jello. Tony, the sophomore representative, competed along with three others to win the annual contest.

Mike Carey, last year's jello eating champ, attempts to keep the title. Adrienne Garber cheers on her fellow senior.

The junior class shows tremendous spirit with their "Terrible Towels." Here, juniors Rebekah Levy, Rachel Loscar, Pia Gosh, and Kim Charleton, show off their spirit for '98.

The junior class shows spirit with their own version of "The Lebo Guys." Bruce Phillips, a proud letter O, flexes his muscles for the crowd.

The drum line is a favorite of everyone. At the pep rally, they play their traditional cadences, as the crowd watches in silence.

What was your favorite part of the pep rally?

"The drum line was swell."

—Lucy Jones

"Convincing the football players to let me be in the tug-of-war."

—Greg Dinert

"I liked being honored as a fall athlete, but I loved the band."

—Aubrey DiBella

"I liked the guys that were dressed-up in USC outfits and the Mt. Lebanon people that kept beating them up."

—Phillip Drummond

Dan Schwartz and Max Junker, "USC students" for the day, make mischief during the pep rally festivities.

Starry Night

Black silhouettes in the windows and balloons created a festive atmosphere for this year's Homecoming Dance. Students augmented these decorations with their own silks, sequins, and satin. However, long, elegant dresses and stylish coats and ties did not hinder the wild dancing throughout the night. Students and chaperones could be seen doing "YMCA," "The Electric Slide," and "The Macarena."

A starry night filled with excitement crowded the dance floor which, at midnight, turned back into Center Court.

Doing "The Twist," Eric Lantzman boogies to the floor of Center Court.

During the recognition of the Homecoming Court, Brooke Nuckles waves to the camera as Kate Hooton looks on.

Dancing to the popular "YMCA," students crowd the floors and planters as they excitedly spell the song's title with their arms.

These dance-goers pack the dance floor for the fast, loud music which was played for most of the evening.

*What did you
like about Homecoming?*

"I liked the music, except I wish they would've played more slow songs, so I'd have a chance to dance with different people."

—R.J. Proie

"The Macarena ruled the dance floor. I had fun dancing with my friends."

—Eric Carr

"Everyone looked very nice. It was nice to see people I normally see in jeans wearing nice clothes."

—Nina Sonbolian

Homecoming Queen Jen Rabbitt dances with one of her kings, Tom Buczynski, while Katie Beardsley dances with the other Homecoming King, Cory Bluemling.

Taking a break from dancing, Jeff Breckinridge, Dana Burrows, and Jon Burdette stop to chat.

Time Away From Blue and Gold

Let's face it. Mondays are the worst. We all know why. Monday means the fun of the weekend is over.

Weekends provide time for relaxation and fun without the pressures of the long school day. Some students go to parties while other go camping. Some check out the latest movies at the Galleria while others listen to their favorite bands in concert at the Civic Arena. As fun and diverse as our weekend activities are, Sunday night means a load of homework due the next morning.

During a Young Life retreat to Windy Gap, Aimee Harper, Vanessa Vanzin, and Jen Tylka enjoy the scenery. Many students spend their weekends participating in youth group events and retreats.

At a weekend party, these friends give buddy Meghan Bragdon a much-needed lift.

Laura Zadinsky, practicing for her stint in a milk mustache ad, enjoys the refreshments at a weekend party.

These boys do "male bonding" with a good old-fashioned game of mud football. After the game, they show off their battle wounds.

What is your favorite weekend activity?

"Just being with my friends and hanging out."

—Megan Gregory

"I like to play football with my friends."

—Nick Taffoni

"I catch up on my sleep."

—Rhiannon Evans

"Hitting the slopes at Seven Springs."

—Eli Frank

Excited to be at the football game, Erica Blumenschein, Dianna Kulik, and Amy Kaczowski try to keep warm in the stands.

Katie Coll, Lauren Ferrari, and Tatiana Zyznewski's sweatshirts proclaim that Stone Harbor is where they'd love to spend every weekend.

A Working Force

Go to the mall theater and you're sure to see Mt. Lebanon students working for a living. Many students have jobs to earn extra money for clothes or for college. Other students do work that is not paid, as community service is an integral part of students' lives. Students join service clubs or sign up for the many volunteer opportunities available in the Activities Office.

At the Independence Court's "Senior Prom," Kaely Mar-mion learns some new dance steps from her partner.

For his job at a bowling alley, Ari Shtulman's duties include handling the different sizes and styles of bowling shoes behind the counter.

J.D. Taylor charms his "date," who looks anxious to hit the dance floor.

Why do you enjoy employment or volunteerism?

"Along with making good friends at work, I've made a great deal of money for college."
—Jenny Blasi

"I got to meet people from all different backgrounds by doing community service in Williamsburg this summer."
—Sarah Linn

"Volunteering gives me a good feeling, because it gives me a chance to do something for others."
—Lexi Zacharias

"Service with a smile" is Tom Porter's motto as he handles shopping carts at the Food Gallery.

Bobby Michael, a member of Mt. Lebanon's Chore CORPS, shovels snow for elderly Mt. Lebanon residents. Chore CORPS members are actively involved in helping senior citizens in our community.

Friendship

I love you
Not only for what you are,
But for what I am
When I am with you.

I love you,
Not only for what
You have made of yourself,
But for what
You are making of me.

I love you
For the part of me
That you bring out;
I love you
For putting your hand
Into my heaped-up heart
And passing over
All the foolish, weak things
That you can't help
Dimly seeing there,
And for drawing out
Into the light
All the beautiful belongings
That no one else had looked
Quite far enough to find.

I love you because you
Are helping me to make
Of the lumber of my
life
Not a tavern
But a temple;
Out of the works
Of my every day
Not a reproach
But a song.

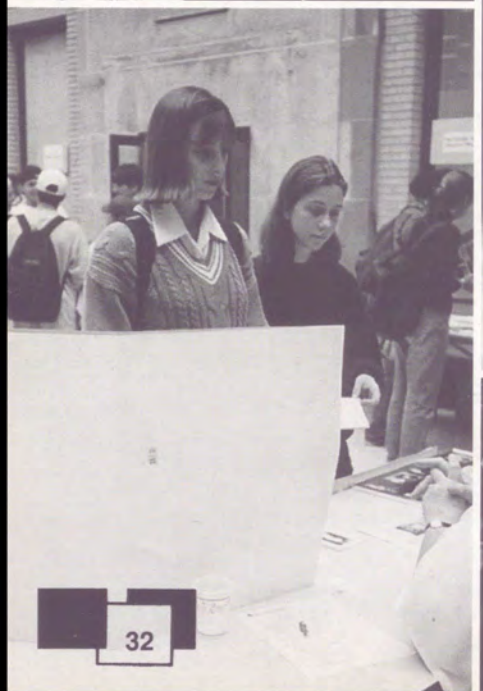

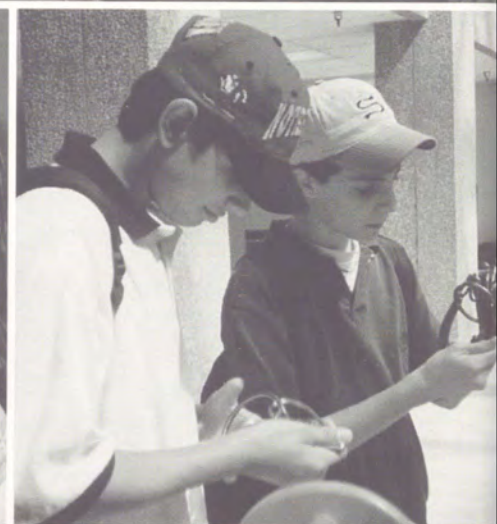

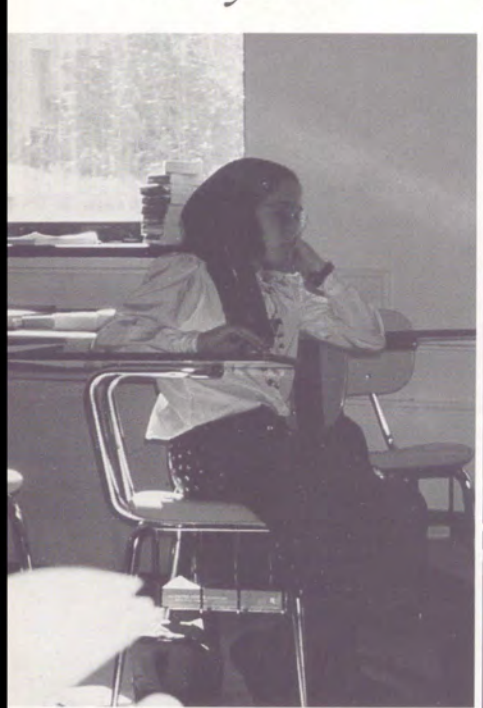

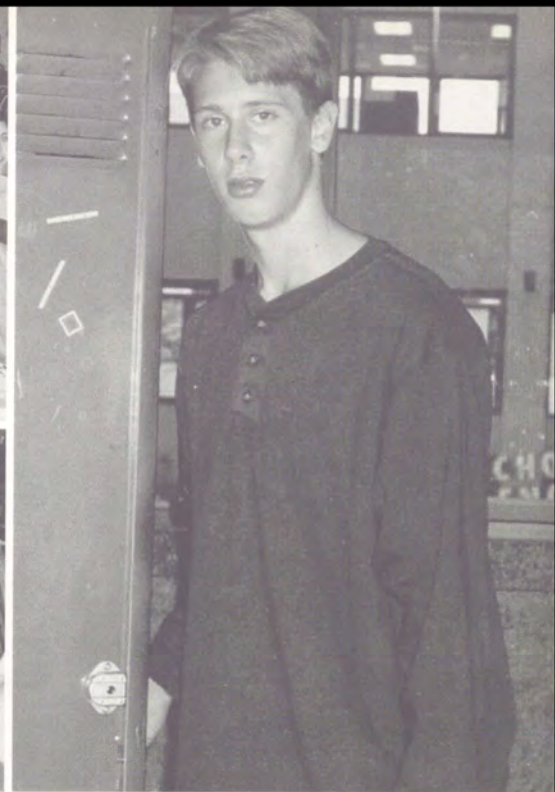

I love you
Because you have done
More than any creed
could have done
To make me good,
And more than any fate
could have done
to make me happy.

You have done it
without a touch,
without a word,
without a sign,
You have done it
By being yourself.
Perhaps that is what
Being a friend means,
After all.

Life on Mars

Evening Theatre Company decided to put a new twist on its evening performance. Directed by Mrs. Schreiner, the company performed Ray Bradbury's The Martian Chronicles, a collection of stories about humans trying to colonize the planet Mars and about the Martians trying to retain control of their planet. Student director Liza McNulty explained the play's larger significance, "This is truly a parallel to the struggle of the Native American culture. This production is a new way to look at the intolerance of two societies."

As Mr. III, Nora Gluch explains to the Earthlings how the Martians feel about humans. Like any oppressed or imperialized people, the Martians do not appreciate human intervention in their lives.

A mission crew from Earth examines the Martian remains.

Martian couple Yll and Ylla, portrayed by Dan Kost and Tammy Seigert discuss Ylla's bizarre dreams about a human.

Don't be fooled as Laura Tomacari's character, Mr. Black, is. Mr. Black is toasting his homecoming, but "his family" is really made up of evil Martians.

What did you like about The Martian Chronicles?

"The Martian Chronicles worked so well because it was an ensemble cast. It is unforgettable."
—Rachel Friede

"I like the set and the costumes. The astronaut suits actually looked like astronaut suits. The acting was very good."
—Katie Morrell

"I was really surprised with the presentation. It was really great."
—Katie Trau

The backstage happenings of most productions are often not seen or thought of by audiences. The Martian Chronicles' cast used the Little Theater's green room to apply makeup, change costumes, and relax before going onstage. Junior Alicia Reed jokes around with castmate Shelly Walker.

Martian Liza McNulty may at first scare Captain Parkhill, played by Bill McCaskey, and his wife, played by Alicia Reed, but she later sells the deed to Mars to the couple.

Dining at fancy restaurants is part of the excitement of the Snowball evening. This group of sophomores poses for a picture as they peruse their menus for the perfect gourmet meal.

Heather McCormick and Steve Puhala watch the video screen and listen to the music as they watch their friends dancing. Heather and Steve know that, for seniors, Snowball is a special dance.

*What makes the Snowball Dance
so much fun?*

"The atmosphere . . . everyone's having a good time."

—Matt Wilson

"The DJ was good, and everyone got along."

—Kaye Gideon

"Dinner and after the dance were fun."

—Jason Namy

"I liked hanging out afterwards."

—Todd Levarse

Tammy Seigert and Jason Sanjana show off their dancing skills on the crowded floor. Rap and techno music played for most of the dance, but slow songs were interspersed to give dancers like Tammy and Jason a break.

Junior Mike Hathy enjoys dancing at Snowball and does not stop all evening.

White Winter Snowball

Fun was in the air when Mt. Lebanon's traditional Sadie Hawkins-style dance was held in Center Court. For Snowball, the pressure was off the guys, because girls asked their dates and paid for tickets and pre-dance meals. Center Court was transformed into a palace of red and white hearts and balloons, and dancers munched on candy hearts bearing Valentine messages.

The highlight of the evening for many seemed to be after-dance activities. One brave group of seniors ventured out to Primanti's in the Strip District for sandwiches in the wee hours of the night.

The hottest spot at Snowball is the dance floor, where finding space is as hard as copying the best dancers.

This group takes advantage of the fun of Snowball. They are dressed up and on the dance floor, pausing only briefly for a photo opportunity.

Beth Powell and Mumeko Tsuda trade their usual jeans and T-shirts for glamorous dresses.

Delicious Mornings

Breakfast at school? In a cafeteria? Though at first glance this does not appear to be a fun way to spend a morning, everyone who has ever attended a Waffle Breakfast knows how great they can be. "Chef Graf" and parent volunteers work hard at the waffle irons, cranking out delicious confections for growing numbers of students.

It is becoming more and more popular for friends and teams to meet at the Waffle Breakfast, and some clubs now hold meetings during the Breakfast.

Held each month, the Waffle Breakfast is a great way to start the day and a tasty way to show school spirit.

Seats fill quickly at a Waffle Breakfast, as Lesley Hutton knows. Not only is she reserving her own seat, but she is also saving seats for her friends.

Teachers and students both enjoy Waffle Breakfasts. Sometimes, they even sit together.

Emily Gosselin will "kiss up" to anyone who will get her another waffle from the all-you-can-eat buffet.

"Show me the money!" insists Mr. Butera to any student who wants to come to the Waffle Breakfast. For all that good food, students must pay one dollar.

Daniel Stolkowski likes hanging out with friends at the Waffle Breakfast, but he knows the real draw is the food.

Why do you go to the Waffle Breakfasts?

"It's one more reason for a senior to get up and come early to school."
—Jen Rabbitt

"That's the best breakfast I have all month; a bowl of Life cereal just doesn't cut it."
—Amy Ludman

"I don't. They're always cancelled due to a school delay."
—Bruce Phillips

"It jump starts my day."
—Lesley Hutton

Sports: Not Just Competition

When people think of SPORTS, they think rivalry. Players, coaches, and fans alike feel the tension in the air when two rival teams come together to do battle. Whatever the sport, there is always that certain team you would just love to beat and victory over them just seems sweeter. Girls' volleyball has Baldwin, the swim team has Bethel Park, and, of course, the Football team always wants to crush U.S.C., to name just a few.

However, at Mt. Lebanon High School, SPORTS is not just competition. It's true that throughout the season your opponents become your enemies, but, on the other hand, your coaches become your role models and your teammates become your closest friends. Throughout the season, every team starts to bond, and the long practices, the spaghetti dinners, the awards banquets, the shouts of victory, and even the quiet bus rides home contribute to a team's sense of family.

Students at Mt. Lebanon learn what it takes to be a team on the sidelines, in the stands, as well as on the field. Whether cheering "Go Lebo!", blasting air horns, or banging pots and pans, everyone can take pride in our school. School spirit brings everyone together.

Many opportunities exist for students to get involved in Mt. Lebanon sports. Besides school-sponsored sports, students can join club sports, such as the players who carry big sticks and play Lacrosse or the ones that carry big paddles and row Crew.

Intramurals, such as basketball, football, and hockey, are a big part of SPORTS. They give to those who desire a chance to show off their skills against other students. However, after deciding to play, when your name is on the roster, prepare to take it seriously or you could get seriously hurt!

Auxiliaries such as Rockettes and Marching Band also contribute to our sports by providing constant encouragement to Lebo's athletes. Lastly, the fundamental part of SPORTS that must not be overlooked are the fans. Adding a spark to the atmosphere of any game, a charged crowd can inspire Mt. Lebanon to play even harder.

So while sitting in the stands chanting K-I-L-L-U-S-C, remember that SPORTS is cooperation, teamwork, and school spirit; it's definitely more than just competition.

"Sports is an outlet; it gives you an identity and a team to hang out with."
— Wes Wiloughby

No Obstacle Too Big to TACKLE

No student can think of a more enjoyable way to spend a Friday night than at Mt. Lebanon Stadium cheering the home team. This year, the fans watched many exciting plays.

Experience and determination shaped this year's Blue Devil football team. The players endured rough off-season training in the weight room. Moreover, during the season they practiced everyday after school on the turf. Senior Todd Schnirel comments, "Football teaches commitment and team effort."

In addition to emphasizing dedication on the field, the coaches encouraged players to keep up their studies off the field to mold well-rounded students. On and off the field, football fans can be proud of this year's team.

Running onto the field with spirit, the Mt. Lebanon players gear up for the game against Bethel Park.

After conferring with Coach Haering, Mt. Lebanon's running back, Jon Trau, steps onto the field anticipating a successful play.

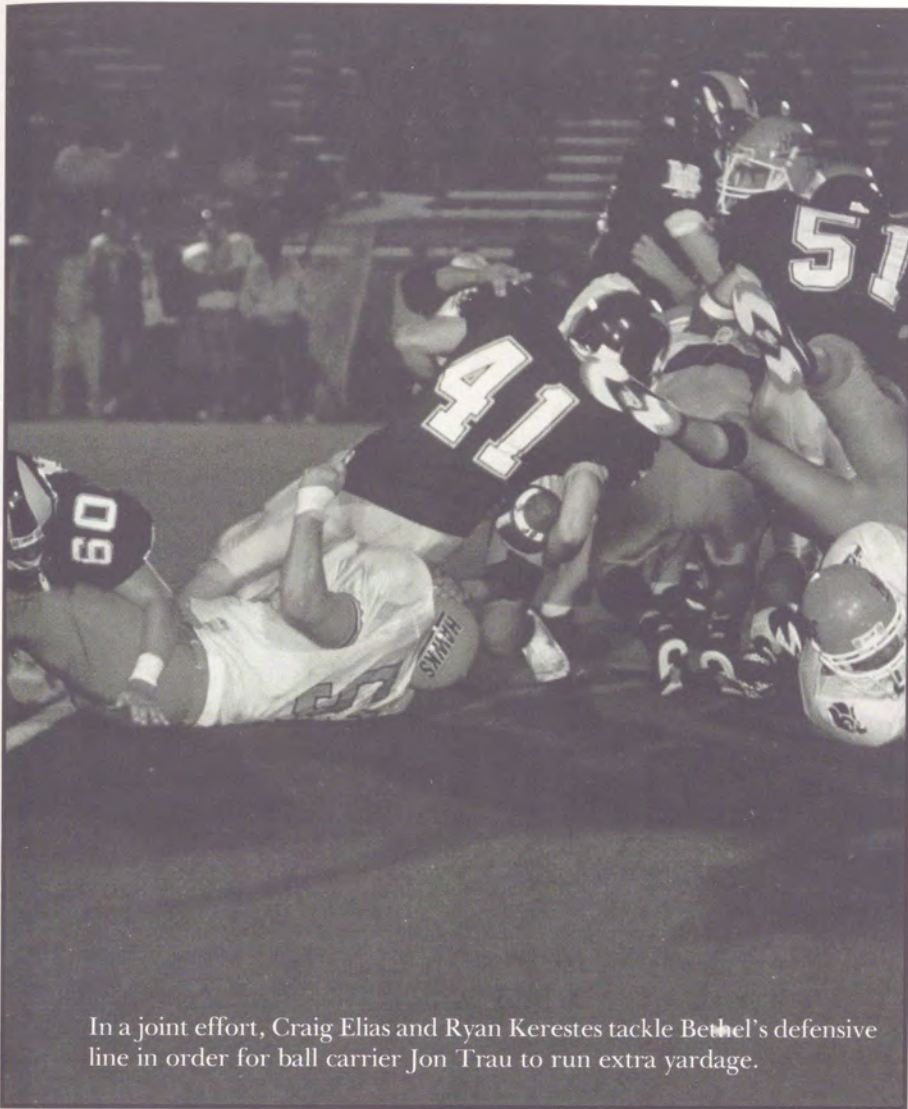

"Senior leadership and great physical shape was an advantage over our opponents."

Marking TIME

Again this year, the Mt. Lebanon band's reputation precedes them. Many people do not acknowledge the hard work and practice that members of the marching band put forth. Not only do the musicians practice one class period per day, but they also endure summer band camp along with many evening rehearsals.

Mt. Lebanon's band is uniquely diverse. In addition to marching band, students can join jazz band, concert band, brass choir, or pep band. Senior Rick Wright remarks, "The bands have introduced me to different types of music that I was not familiar with before I joined."

The band along with the Silks and Rockettes were complimented on their "enthusiasm and outstanding performance" after performing a half-time show at a Steeler game.

The band performs fight songs while Drum Major Ryan Sneysky watches on.

Freshmen cheerleaders, Tia Gupta and Lizzy Henderson, lead the Homecoming Parade with a LEB banner and exuberant smiles.

"Although Cheerleading is a lot of time and hard work, we have so much fun. Our squad is so close; we're like sisters." This quote by Katy Reese, a senior co-captain of the Varsity cheerleaders, sums up their 1996-97 season. Cheerleading has definitely earned the title of a sport. Practicing two times a week for two hours to perfect cheers, mounts, and dances, performing in competitions, working out to a weight and aerobic program, and cheering for a long season from football through wrestling, proves that they are athletes. It is obvious that they become close because they spend so much time together. Cheerleaders commit dedication and spirit to inspire athletes during the pressure of competition.

Shooting For TRADITION

While most of the sports hype this year has gone to the much improved play of the football team, there seems to be one constant in our high school: the boys soccer team always has a superb season. Even though the team lost several key players because of graduation, they always seem to find new talent and new ways to win.

Most of their success can be explained in one word: devotion. It begins in the summer when they sacrifice two weeks of vacation to a pains-taking pre-season. During the season, daily practice occurs at Jefferson field while games are played twice weekly. Hard work and experience has landed them in WPIAL and state playoffs again this year. Mt. Lebanon Boys Soccer has become a powerhouse that opponents can expect to face every year.

Scoring Points for PRIDE

Keeping her eye on the action, Lisa Bleil hustles upfield.

Soccer does not need a seventh inning stretch or an extravagant half-time show to make it an outstanding sport. The girls soccer program, , attracts more spectators each year. The reason for this increase may be the low-scoring defensive struggles which keeps the crowd in constant suspense.

Because of the abundance of skilled players this year, two Junior Varsity teams and one Varsity team practiced and competed. Dedicated to the long pre-season and grueling after-school practices, no matter how tough, they travel to many schools to compete with teams of various strengths.

In addition to developing as athletes and sportswomen, these players learned more through playing soccer than just techniques. Heather Cross, reflecting on what she will take away from her efforts, remarks, "Soccer has helped me deal with overcoming losses."

Can't Pass Up DETERMINATION

This year's team, after losing some of last year's key runners, accumulated new freshmen as well as improved upperclassmen.

Sacrificing some of their summer vacation, members of the team worked diligently from the end of June through the competitive season in the fall. During the summer, the runners averaged thirteen miles per day.

When asked what it takes to be part of the Cross Country team, Taylor Williams responded, "Dedication, a tolerance for pain, and the ability to put up with Coach's jokes."

Undeclared in section meets, the guys illustrate dedication to the sport. Sophomore Andrew Oxenreiter asserted, "I believe in the team and the team believes in me."

By finishing ninth in the PIAA state meet, the team proved to its competitors that Mt. Lebanon can run.

After his race, Chris Fuchs pauses for a moment to catch his breath, one step towards recovery.

At the start of a race, the runners keep in a tight pack, each trying to break away first.

Striding Towards SUCCESS

Katie Lambros utilizes every muscle in order to achieve the perfect stride.

Running is not simple. The Girls' Cross Country Team knows that dedication, team work, and above all the desire to win is needed if you want to beat opponents in the race. Many lessons are learned during the three to six mile runs the team endures during the season. Senior Kaely Marmion explains, "Every demanding practice I make it through gives me more self-determination." Another factor to its success is team unity. Sophomore Katie Lambros states, "It teaches you that winning is as important to the team as it is to the individual." These girls emerged from the season not only better athletes but also better friends. Senior Julie Downs stated, "We worked as a team, each member striving for her own goals."

The cross country team starts out as a group each trying to be the one who gets ahead first. It is important to get an early lead because the course takes them over many hills which can inhibit them from catching up later.

Unbeatable DRIVE

Mt. Lebanon Boys Golf is driving onwards to new heights this year. They had an excellent season. The Junior Varsity finished strong in first place, followed by the Varsity team, which had an amazing undefeated season. So what exactly do these players do? Basically, they try to hit a little, white ball into a tiny hole with as few strokes as possible. This sounds simple, but to accomplish this task takes skill. The team practices every other day at Mt. Lebanon Golf Course and Cool Springs Driving Range. During the season from August to October, matches are played at local courses including Upper St. Clair and Bethel Park.

Golf forces players to keep improving in order to achieve personal goals. It is one of the few sports that players not only compete against other teams, but themselves as well. Mt. Lebanon's attitude of "always give your best" comes out in the boys' golf team.

Their commitment showed distinct results when they defeated one of their toughest competitors, Upper St. Clair. All the girls who play on the tennis team agree that as long as they are enjoying themselves, it never feels like work. According to Freshman Summer Drummond the best advantages to playing tennis are, "You get to make friends, test your ability, and have a good time."

All Set To Win With DEDICATION

Why do girls play volleyball? "It pushes you to be the best," answers sophomore Liz McGonigle. The team is open to any interested Lebo girl who has a positive attitude and is "able to deal with winning and losing," explains sophomore Kristin Wolf. This year, however, the volleyball team became much more familiar with winning than losing. The girls had a remarkable undefeated season as a result of their dedication to success. They never gave up or lost their focus, even when the season turned rough. But this can be expected from a team that always supports each other, no matter what happens.

Rowing With RHYTHM

At the Head of the Schukill this fall, the Girl's Crew Team waits for last minute instructions from their coach.

Many things come to mind when you think of Crew: the boathouse, paddles, the ergometers, cheesecake.

Cheesecake !!! Many sports have fundraisers for support: the band has spaghetti dinners, the baseball team has the Christmas tree sales, and Crew sells cheesecake.

Because they are a club sport, it costs them a lot of money to row. However, that doesn't stop any of the team from wanting to be on the water.

Why do they stick with Crew? "The rides after school with teammates to the boathouse and rowing under the bridges of Pittsburgh with the sun setting in front of you," comments senior Meghan Bragdon.

Displaying their skills twice weekly, the girls played with heart. The 1997 season had its share of disappointments along with sweet victory, but their greatest accomplishment was team unity.

Skating Circles Around The COMPETITION

"The difference between this season and last season is that we skate so much harder," states junior Craig Drew.

Their improvement in skill and speed is evident in the team's record. These Lebo boys experienced a year of rebuilding with playing new tournaments, competing against new teams, and using younger players. "This season has been one of the roughest, but rewarding, also," comments senior Matt Ondrejko. On one point all players agree: The fans are great, heckling the referees and their opponents.

Although the 1997 season was strenuous because of the added games and tournaments, it helped them to refine their talent and increase their speed. Their focused efforts earned them a spot in the playoffs.

Take Down With TECHNIQUE

Every day during the season, Mt. Lebanon wrestlers sweat through two hours of intense practice in the sweltering mat room. They learn new ways to use their strength to out-manuever opponents. Practices include running, weight training, and refining techniques.

This year, Mt. Lebanon had a strong wrestling team with solid senior leadership. Senior Wes Willoughby states, "Our team is really good, but we don't get recognition in the playoffs because we're in a difficult section with tough competition."

Despite this problem, they had an outstanding season, with a few teammates moving on to WPIAL playoffs. Lebo wrestlers have a tight hold on the idea of perserverance.

Shaving Off Seconds For SUCCESS

Flips, turns, frog kicks, weights, running, laps. Just a few of the obstacles required of the most demanding high school sport: swimming. These chlorine junkies are Lebo's most dedicated athletes when it comes to time commitment.

They start their day with practice Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings for an hour and a half. Every day after school, they continue working hard for three more hours.

Besides, what other team would shave their entire bodies just to shave off seconds from their time? The Varsity Boys' Swim Team thinks it's worth it if you break a personal or team record.

All the time spent in the pool has propelled them through an outstanding season. A good number of the boy's team qualified for WPIALS, and a fortunate few moved on to states. Varsity team member Justin Kelly, senior, attributes their success to "dedication".

Head coach Tom Burchill prepares Jay Styperk for his upcoming event.

James Valentine cheers on his teammate who is pushing hard to shave off seconds from his time.

Strokes Of SACRIFICE

Sacrifice is the key word when describing the Mt. Lebanon Girls' Swim Team. Giving up sleep to swim at 6 AM on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, team members sacrifice another three hours after school. The worst part, however, is putting on those damp, clammy suits.

How do they go on the Friday ski trips? What if they want to sleep in? What if they catch senioritis? The answer is they don't.

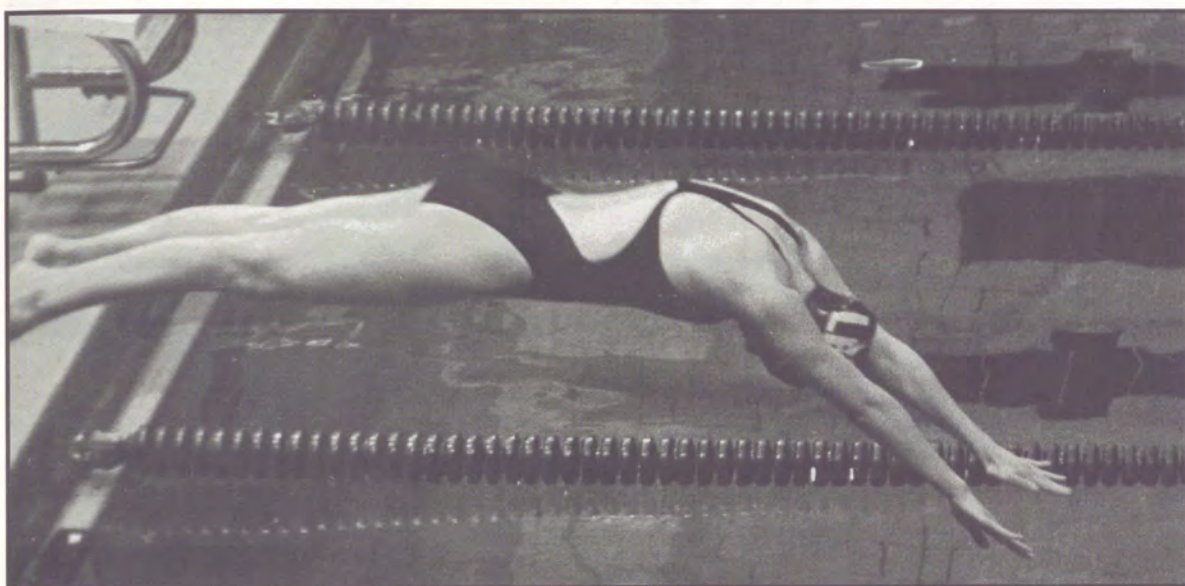

These girls swim through Christmas break, Saturday mornings, broken pool heaters, broken chlorinators, and even the day of Snowball.

Practices include multi-mile runs, weight lifting, abdominal and stretch cord training, and multi-mile laps.

The girls excel as a team in their division as well as individually in their events which proves they're not just splashing around.

Rachel Henderson executes a beautiful butterfly stroke as she strives for WPIAL's.

Aiming For PERFECTION

Looking for a group of Lebo students who can shoot a gun with style (on their bellies)? Then you want the members of the Rifle team. Their precision shooting is a product of long hours of practice, including snowdays and vacations.

Rifle matches consist of the top ten shooters, competing in fifteen minute intervals, shooting at ten different targets. For protection they wear hot leather jackets, an uncomfortable sling around the elbow and lower arm, and a constricting glove. Each bullseye is ten points, a perfect score equalling one hundred points.

Sound like a lot of stress? "The pressure makes me shoot better," comments Diana Kulik, who has attained numerous perfect scores. Rifle may not be a physical sport, but it takes mental control to excel.

Steve Lash fastens his jacket before shooting.

Senior Steve Lash concentrates on adjusting his scope for a more accurate aim.

Organizations: Not Just Clubs

Whether it's a band, a team, a council, or just a group of friends, everyone at Mt. Lebanon High School is involved with some type of ORGANIZATION. Right? Yes, that seems to be the way because ORGANIZATIONS are not just clubs. Students pursue individual interests while gaining new friends and acquaintances in multiple interest groups. For instance, members of the ski club elect officers who arrange weekly ski trips as well as one huge ski trip each year. Meanwhile, ski clubbers also participate in student council and sports, as well.

Some sports exist as ORGANIZATIONS. The crew team, for instance, raises money each year in order to purchase boats and other equipment for its sport.

ORGANIZATIONS, such as Dance Company, bring out the special talents of Lebo students. Dance Company members practice ballet, tap, jazz, and modern dance outside of school as well as during part of their school day. These girls work hard in order to perform flawlessly at the very popular Dance Daytimes.

Other ORGANIZATIONS exist to help others. ChoreCORPS members volunteer their time to help those in our neighborhoods who need assistance shoveling snow or raking leaves. On a larger scale, Amnesty International works to help people around the world. By petitioning political leaders where citizens are treated unfairly, this ORGANIZATION know it can make a difference.

Finally, some ORGANIZATIONS provide services to the school community. The Log, The Devil's Advocate, and The Postscript publish the words and voices of the student body, enhancing school communications. Class councils plan and work to put on dances and school celebrations.

ORGANIZATIONS at Mt. Lebanon High exist to make a difference. They can change the lives of those involved as well as those they help. No matter who is affected, ORGANIZATIONS at Mt. Lebanon High School are more than just clubs.

“Organizations give people an identity that is more definitive than a student number or a grade.”

— Esther Glick

ORGANIZATIONS at Mt. Lebanon High School consist of many dedicated members. The yearbook staff works tirelessly, student council encourages leadership, and Dance Company stretches to excel in the performing arts.

White House

The White House of the high school, Executive Council, is dedicated to planning class activities and fund raisers. The Councils work with Mrs. Ball and class sponsors to plan fundraisers such as Penny Wars and dances like the Glitter and Glitz Dance. All of the exciting Spirit Days students enjoy reflect Executive Council's effort to increase school spirit.

Senior Executive Council includes the eight officers who are elected in the spring, and the seniors plan the school's biggest events, dances, and prom.

Working on Executive Council is difficult, but it can also be rewarding and fun, especially when senior council emcees the annual Holiday Show and participates in their own act. Junior Samantha Kelley looks forward to this, saying, "The responsibility and time commitment can be demanding, but when you see the difference you've made, it's worth it."

White House Aides

Taxation without representation may have been a problem for early colonists, but not for Mt. Lebanon students.

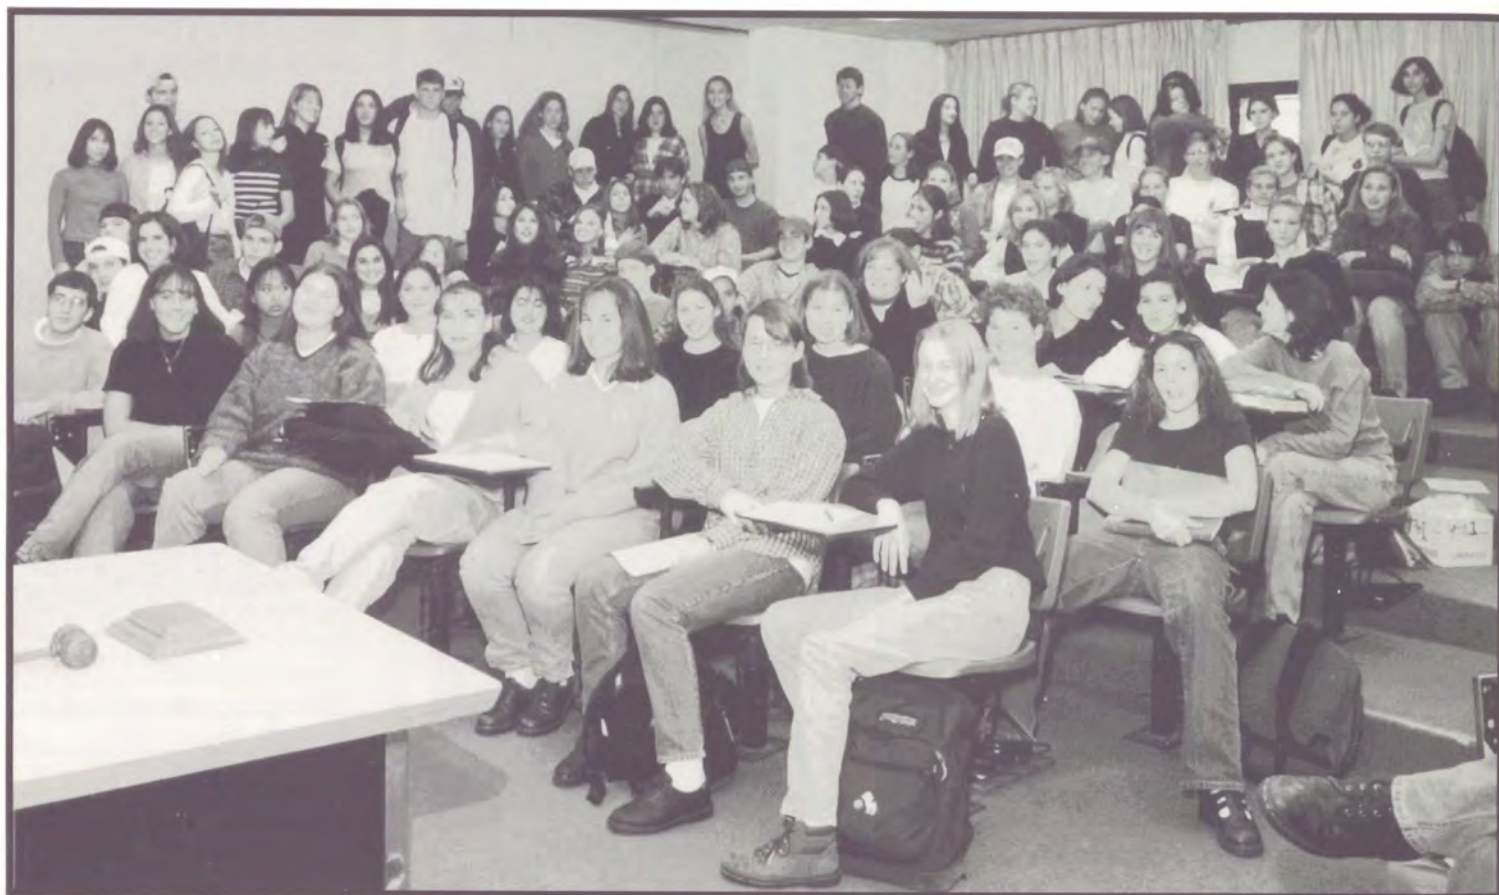

Refelecting on her duties as homeroom representative, Julie Fellabom remarks, "Being a homeroom rep helps develop my leadership skills, and without a homeroom rep, my homeroom and most of the others would be clueless about things going on in the school, such as Waffle Breakfasts."

Annually in each homeroom, two representatives are elected to take on the task of relaying important news to the homeroom about student council and social events. Homeroom representatives are also responsible for clearing out their homeroom's mailbox weekly, running homeroom fundraisers and charity drives, and suggesting classmates' ideas at student council meetings.

Aiding the government of his school, Kenny Staut remarks, "I'm proud to say I've been able to help my classmates and improve my school, and I am a better person because of the great experience that is student government."

Red Letter Committees

"SLAP is not about promoting violence, but rather enabling students to take leadership roles during their high school years," according to Mr. Mark Kernion, sponsor. SLAP, an acronym for Student Leadership Action Program, trains student leaders at fun-filled summer workshops and weekly meetings. Student leaders also demonstrate their skills by planning, organizing, and leading local elementary school children in a day of activities at the high school.

Hate sharing a locker? Don't like standing in long cafeteria lines? Tell a PACS member. Members meet monthly with Mr. Graf to discuss and solve these knotty problems.

Do you feel your economics class should earn honors credit? Talk to a Student Curriculum Advisory Council member. He or she will be able to express curriculum concerns and give feedback to curriculum supervisors.

Black & White and Read All Over

Read all over and read for many years to come! The Log is not just for high school days, but for a lifetime! Just think! The night before that all important 20th high school reunion while flipping through the pages, you spot that elusive person. Will they talk to me? Will they dance with me?

According to co-editor Andrea Bookman, "The yearbook is a piece of history. They are our archives. In the Log Office, we have yearbooks from the 1940's. In the year 2050, students of your grandchildren's generation will look through this book to see what life was like in 1997."

The Log Staff is committed to carrying out its theme of "Life: It's Not Just Black and White." As a piece of photojournalism, the book includes black and white and color photos as well as spot color to enhance the development of its theme.

Photo Club members assist in the task by providing pictures of high quality. Photographer Ryan Laird remarks, "Time in the darkroom near deadlines is intense, but the hard work pays off." Photo Club members do more than just help the yearbook staff. Under Mr. Batchelor's tutelage, aspiring photographers develop portfolios of their own work for recreation, to apply for apprenticeships or to use in contests.

Yearbook work is intense, but the product of the staff's all consuming efforts lasts forever!

No Blackout

A communications blackout seems unlikely at Mt. Lebanon High School. Here, students publish a newspaper and a literary magazine. Some students announce the day's events while others learn to communicate with hearing impaired students.

The Devil's Advocate is the "student voice" of the high school. Editorials, critical reviews, and sports updates make it popular.

More creative students submit poems, stories, art, or essays for review by the Postscript staff. The best of these submissions are published in a year-end volume.

Sign Language Club helps to ensure that students with impaired hearing do not experience any personal communications blackouts.

Finally, every morning students gather around the PA microphone, preparing to announce that day's events. The news of the day must be broadcast!

Some students work to bridge the generation gap. ChoreCORPS members shovel snow and rake leaves for elderly neighbors.

Is it any wonder that foreign language clubs are among the most popular at Mt. Lebanon? Many of them focus on summer trips abroad. The German Club enjoys a long-term alliance with Stiftisches Gymnasium in Germany, and the yearly exchange program is a highlight of both clubs' activities. Says Maggie Manzo, "It's exciting to see so many students interested in speaking German and learning about the German culture." This year at an annual fest, members learned the polka, a traditional German dance.

The French and Latin Clubs visit new destinations each year, including Paris, Rome, and this year, Montreal. Latin Club member Reed Acrey exclaims, "The excitement of learning new cultures and getting to know people is what makes foreign languages great!"

The Great White Way

Broadway, the Great White Way, lights up the minds of students of the theater here at Mt. Lebanon High School. Visions of seeing their own names on marquees lining the streets near Broadway dance in the heads of aspiring actors. These dreams become reality for a short time when students step out on stage or work backstage to ensure a successful production.

In the fall, Evening Theater Company performed The Martian Chronicles. Jamie Adams found it "exciting to perform in front of the community."

In the spring, students in grades 9-12 performed Guys and Dolls with the support of the school's musical groups.

This year's technical theater produced amazing sets for the theater groups' performances.

For example, The Martian Chronicles set included seemingly evanescent stalagmites. In addition to building sets, acquiring props, and arranging the lighting, technical theater members work continuously while actors perform on stage.

The Cinema Club meets at local movie theaters once a week to view newly released films. Afterwards, they discuss and analyze the movies. R.J. Proie finds it "very enjoyable to view current films and discuss them with other students."

Energetic theater students aspire to a multitude of possibilities: a performance at the Pantages or simply employment along the Great White Way.

A Black Tie Affair

Black ties and formal attire are required at state dinners and performances by Triple Trio and the Jazz Ensembles. Because musical talent seems effortless, it's easy to overlook the preparation musicians must endure to produce a great show.

The Triple Trio, an elite group of singers, holds audition for only a few openings. These girls then perform at school functions as well as in some of the starring parts for the school musical.

The choir is also a very demanding club. Not only do they have a class period of preparation time, but they also spend evenings practicing during the weeks before a concert.

The jazz bands, made up of growing number of interested brass and percussion players, meet weekly to rehearse. The jazz bands are in the band concert and go on band trips, as well.

These groups spend hours rehearsing and practicing so that they can produce classy "black tie" affairs for avid listeners.

White Fantasy

Grace, poise, fantasy, and imagination describe Dance Company. Talented and experienced, Dance Company members must be skilled in choreography as well as performance. During class and after school, the girls practice for their yearly daytime, a demonstration and evaluation of their hard work. "It's an opportunity to express ourselves through dance and to share this experience with others," says Laura Neal.

Dedication and initiative has brought the orchestra the prestige that it desires. After years of individual practice and days of group rehearsal, these musicians prepare to perform at Open House as well as at the Winter and Spring Concerts and the annual musical. "This year's orchestra is stronger than it's ever been," states concertmaster Mihir Gandhi, following the orchestra's selection to play at the PMEA state conference in April. Mihir adds, "We're lucky to have a conductor like Mr. Vogel, who makes an effort to know each student personally."

The district's official television station, broadcast on Channel 19, runs because of the creative work of the Video Club. Much afterschool is spent on creating, taping, and editing programs. Involved students record school and township events which can be observed by a growing audience.

White Heat

A calculus test or an analytical essay are no substitutes for the challenge of "white heat." Only the competition of Academic Games or Speech and Debate can offer the "white heat" experience.

Well, what is "white heat?" It describes a state of intense mental activity; this state of mind is no stranger to students on Speech and Debate or Academic Games teams. Competing on various levels, Academic Games students "play" six games which tap English, math, or social studies knowledge. Students who qualify in the local tournaments travel to Georgia for the nationals, where they traditionally bring home a good deal of winning hardware.

Talking about last year's trip,

Amy Turian relates, "The teams grew very close to each other. We even used goofy sayings that other teams didn't understand. Sometimes, we even received strange looks, but Atlanta was still a ton of fun."

Similar to Academic Games, Speech and Debate students compete fiercely. Crystal Manich says, "Forensics is cool because you're interacting with people. It also gives me the chance to develop skills which I can use later in life." Prose, drama, poetry, and Congress are the topics challenging forensics members. Whether speaking extemporaneously or from a prepared script, these students enjoy the white heat "rush!"

White Water & White Outs

Mt. Lebanon students venture outside to find something fun to do. It may be white water rafting, skiing after huge "white-outs," or observing animal and plant life.

The Outdoors Club enjoy caving and biking. They have also gone to Ohiopyle hiking and white water rafting. These students have a great love and interest in the outdoors.

The Environmental Club's main purpose is to educate other students about the pollution and educate them regarding practices that will preserve and improve the environment.

Science Club helps refine members' research and experimental skills. They are able to perform original science experiments and, upon completion, present their results at competitions.

The Ski Club embarks on weekly Friday night ski trips to Seven Springs. About eighty students, under the direction of Mr. McCoy and the Ski Club officers, head up to Seven Springs for a night of skiing.

Whether enjoying white water or white outs, experimenting, or preserving the out of doors, its nature and mysteries, club members take their interests far beyond the school walls.

Red Cross

Red Cross means help for students who feel down and out. Fortunately, fellow students willingly come to the aid of the sick and infirmed. "Working in the medical office gives me a chance to meet people and help out at our school," says Natalie Seeman, a freshman member of the squad.

Other students help out in offices and areas which interest them. Students who work in the Activities Office are student council members or sometimes just students who want to help. Kaely Marmion comments, "It's always so busy in there. It's great to help Mrs. Ball. She works so hard."

Library aide Sara Luby helps the librarians by putting books away, updating the weekly and monthly magazines, and assisting with putting materials away.

Sound and Stage crew work evenings to make sure that lighting and sound is optimum in the auditorium and theater. Jay Miller, a freshman, remarks, "It's fun to do the work and then see how it all turns out."

Students here certainly provide aid to the smooth operation of programs.

Academics: Not Just Homework

The overriding force associated with the high school experience is homework. In order to prepare students for college and the rigors of the work force, teachers assign work to be completed outside of the classroom. Long assignments, such as reading a twenty page chapter with minute printing, becomes common for AP U. S. History students. Other lengthy endeavors may be involve math problems 1-50, ALL. High school paves the way for future work.

Luckily, at Mt. Lebanon High School, ACADEMICS is not just homework. Many teachers take time from classroom routine to involve students in experiential learning. Whether it's time spent in the Writing Lab or time spent on a field trip, ACADEMICS for Lebo students takes many shapes and forms.

While remaining in school, some classes take a break from routine with lab work. Math classes visit the computer labs where they learn geometric concepts or create spreadsheets. Furthermore, physics students can be seen shooting off rockets, while A.P. Chemistry students occasionally make slime in the lab. Other classes may listen to guest speakers or special presentations dealing with ACADEMICS.

Although in-school activities may be exciting, out of school events also provide important experiences. On many days, students leave for part or all of the school day to go on field trips. History and art students may travel to New York and Washington, DC, while ecology classes may visit the Pittsburgh Zoo. Junior history students travel to famous battle sights, such as Fort Necessity. Additionally, some language students use summer opportunities to visit other countries. Imagine a trip to Spain or Germany! ACADEMICS takes students around the globe!

So, work hard, and Lebo students will show you why ACADEMICS is not just homework.

"I think we'll have a big advantage in college because the Mt. Lebanon curriculum is really geared toward preparation for the future."

— Eric Koester

ACADEMICS proves itself as more than just homework. On an A.P. Environmental Science field trip, seniors Ryan Cercione, Josh Broaded, and Kenny Staut catch and tag grasshoppers in an attempt to study the insects' habits.

"This office can be kind of overwhelming. I could spend 24 hours a day answering phone calls, but when I want to escape the office, I head off to elementary schools. I especially like kindergarten and 1st grade rooms, tripping over little chairs. When I'm here, I like to walk the halls and go to the cafeterias to see kids doing live things and acting like real kids. It's my reality check because this district is based on student needs."

—Dr. Smartschan

"Mr. Graf Wants To See You..."

Many people think when someone is called to Mr. Graf's office it's because that person has been smoking in the bathroom. But dealing with students in trouble isn't the only reason Mr. Graf is here. Mr. Graf is involved with all aspects of the school, including instruction of the teachers, helping the supervisors with the curriculum, and ensuring that graduation requirements are met. He feels, however, "the best part of my job is visiting classrooms and seeing the curriculum in action."

Because of his involvement in so much of the school's proper functioning, it's no wonder that Mr. Graf has Mrs. Fauth working with him. She tries to get "work done accurately and on time." Mrs. Stein and Mrs. Fauth would have to agree that there are some perks to working in the office. Mrs. Stein had the experience of meeting Carnell Lake of the Steelers, even though she didn't realize who he was until after he signed the visitor sign in sheet.

Nothing Routine

The students who take daily trips to the Attendance Office probably realize there is more going on there than just students asking questions. The secretaries, Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Stull, Mrs. Fiddler-McDermott, and Mrs. Donnelly, save the principals two to three hours of menial labor by assisting students, running the office, and answering parental problems. Dr. Martin remarks, "All the secretaries really helped me when I first came. I would not have learned office routines without their help. I feel certain that Mr. Butera and Dr. Sullivan feel the same way." Not Pictured: Mrs. Lois Anderson

The Kenya Book Drive

The Kenya Book Drive, created by Ms. Schomer, helps young Kenyan children acquire a library at their elementary school. When Ms. Schomer went to Kenya for three years with the Peace Corps, she taught school and lived in a remote Kenyan village.

Each year she heads this drive in order to help the Kenyan children to better their education. Pictured are five students, members of the Book Drive Committee, who are making posters to inform and encourage students to bring in books to be sent to Kenya. Along with the book, the students bring in a quarter for the cost of sending the book.

The War Novel

English classes involve learning history and culture first hand in order to better understand literature. A very memorable project for these tenth grade honors English students is interviewing a war veteran after reading All Quiet On The Western Front. Here Matt Bookman looks over actual photographs taken during WWII which served as visuals for an oral report. Also pictured is Gabe Lloyd who interpreted the life of a war veteran while wearing his stepfather's army jacket. Through this project, students are able to grasp a more complex view of war. After reading the highly anti-war novel, All Quiet On The Western Front, they read another war novel presenting another viewpoint. Through their listening and reading experiences, they can reflect on the war experience and come to their own conclusions.

The Gorilla Fund

For the past several years, including this one, anthropology classes have been raising money for a very worthy cause: The Gorilla Fund. The gorilla fund is a nationally known fund founded in memory of gorilla researcher, Diane Fossey. Due to the efforts of Mrs. Pricilla Zappa, pictured here with senior Ari Shtulman, these classes have provided large donations for several years to the Gorilla Fund. "It's a very worthy cause. Gorillas have provided much of our information about the development of humans," remarks senior Todd Arnold. "Each year, the anthropology classes make a competition out of it. Students have a sense of competition, yet realize that they are raising money for a gentle animal." No doubt the Gorilla Fund is just another cause showing how involved our students can be when fighting for a worthy cause.

Tommie Sarchet uses the social studies computer lab to gather information about a specific aspect of the Korean culture. The high school is fortunate to make Encarta, an encyclopedia for computers, available to the students. Encarta makes it easy to find information on all sorts of topics. Just plug it in and you're on your way to a font of knowledgeable facts which can be incorporated into written assignments.

World Cultures: International Understanding

Mrs. Lewandowski passes back homework assignments to eager students in her sixth period World Cultures class. The first semester of World Cultures is spent learning the cultures of countries such as Russia, China, and Japan. The students are taught about foreign relations, arts and crafts, and the diverse economies of each country. This makes for a challenging, yet, enjoyable class. Students leave at the end of the year knowing the cause and effect of ethnocentrism and gaining a deeper understanding of other customs. ## The Art of Burning Things

In the chemistry lab, students experiment using dangerous chemicals and equipment. Using magnesium and Bunsen burners, students must avoid chances for disaster; therefore, labs must be done carefully. Goggles and aprons must be worn for ultimate protection. Lab safety is a must! Even so, mishaps occur, including small accidental fires.

In this picture, Erin Bruesewitz, Mr. Roddy, and Reilly Benson are demonstrating how to use glass rods to study atmospheric pressure.

Man or Horse?

Every year, Mr. Haberberger's students perform the horsepower lab. In this lab, partners work together to determine how much horsepower they possess. Students first walk up specific flights of stairs and measure how much time it takes them. This step is then repeated; however, each student now runs up the stairs. Using this and other measurements, each student calculates how much horsepower he or she exerts. In this photo, lab partners Brian Arth and Raleigh Berry prepare for the experiment by examining the length of the stairs which they'll be travelling.

Physics is Phun

When students hear the word physics, they respond, "Yikes!" and "Help," but once they get past their original fears, they realize how intriguing it can actually be. "Physics is Phun" is the title given to this course by the teachers because of the experiments they perform throughout the year. The rocket lab is a favorite with students. Finally, at the end of the year, all physics students with a "C" or better trek down to Kennywood for a day of fun and first hand science. Here Mr Ober proves the conservation of rotational inertia.

Working with Circles

In Center Court, Mrs. Johns' physics class works on the circular motion lab. Throughout the two periods of lab, these students work on keeping the string at a constant velocity. This task is much harder than it looks because problems such as the string wrapping around the little button on baseball caps and frequent "cramping of the arm" occur.

In this picture, Mrs. Johns walks away, confident that Jen Sodini has mastered the task.

Breaking the Stereotype

Many people stereotype cheerleaders as "airheads". However, four Mt. Lebanon cheerleaders shattered that stereotype by competing as a team in the county-wide Allegheny Intermediate Unit Calcu-Solve Bowl. Maggie Manzo, who placed second overall in the event, competed on a team with fellow cheerleaders Bethany Barone, Andrea Bookman, and Sonali Chakravorti. Another Mt. Lebanon team composed of seniors Mike Nemeth and Debbie Schorr and juniors Piya Ghosh and Vince Mareino also performed well at Calcu-Solve.

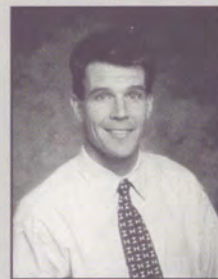

The cheerleaders feel it is important that people know that they do more than dance and cheer. Each team member was selected by his or her math teacher, and team sponsor Dr. Holdan exclaimed, "It was fun to break the traditional stereotype and take a team of all girls to compete in a math contest." In fact, said Bethany Barone, "We are proud of being cheerleaders, and we are proud of being intelligent. I think it is great that Mt. Lebanon cheerleaders totally disprove the old stereotype."

Evolving from slide rules, the TI 85 calculators have always been of great use to students. Here, Brendan Fagan and Ed DeLair participate in a group activity. Not only do calculators help with math problems, but they are used for a plethora of different functions, such as probability, graphing, and statistics.

C++ Earns an A+

Learning programming languages is popular among students. Here Jen Blasi and Alison Mishizen work on assigned programs for their C++ class. In other computer classes, students learn Pascal and Basic. Learning computer languages complements the regular math curriculum.

Friends from Around the World

Every year, many new faces appear in the hallways. For some of us, they are only acquaintances, but for others they become close friends. These are our exchange students who come to Pittsburgh by way of AFS, Rotary and other exchange programs. These programs promote international relationships first hand.

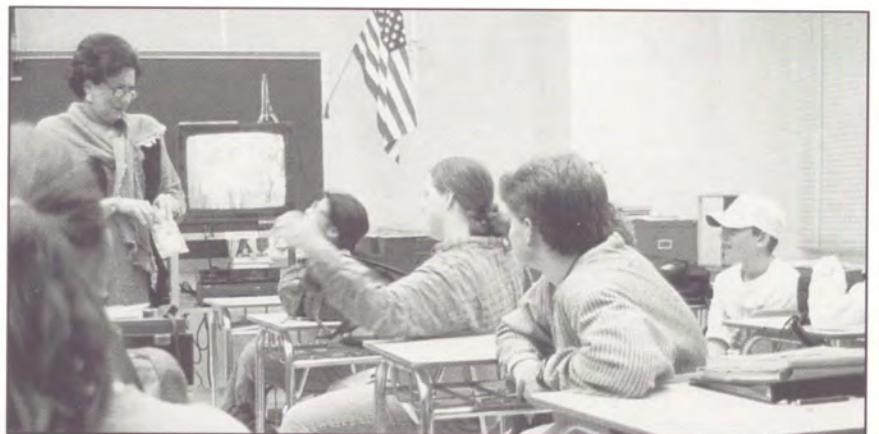

Throughout the year, this group of kids hold social events in order to spend time with one another. Pictured are Malte Motullo from Germany, Alex Iride from Italy, and Baris Cakan from Turkey, exchanging friendly conversations with Kim Stolkowski, Meghan Mitchell, and Andrea Mechenbier. These activities expand cultural understandings.

Touring France from the Classrooms

This freshman French class makes traveling around the world look rather easy. Here Madame Kefel has grabbed the class' attention as she shows them a documentary of France and explains the grammar usage of the actors. This video is a great way to learn by observing as well as by hearing.

Over the years, these students will take with them the grammar and the sounds of the language. Little do these students realize but their early comprehension of the language will help them in future classes, conversations and, possibly, experiences.

Patience Makes PERFECT!

Or at least so I've heard. While in the art room, patience is essential because all the hurrying in the world can not make a pot harden quicker or the paint dry faster. A gentle hand must be used on these pottery wheels in order to make the ornate designs perfect. These artists, Lauren Stringi and Susan Silver are discovering just how to apply the techniques which Mr. Shenefelt has spent the semester teaching them.

While making these pots, the creator must look carefully in order to see just how they want the design to develop and where they want to add more clay and other tedious details. This is not a talent discovered overnight. Many aspiring artists must wait through decades of teaching and training before they are "discovered". Art takes a lot of patience, hard work, and skill.

"And the credits go to..."

The Mt Lebanon T V production company is an extremely successful group. After they spend part of the semester learning the equipment in the studio, they write their own commercials and melodramas. These scripts are then directed, performed, filmed, edited, and produced by themselves.

At the end of the course, Dr. Hulick puts together an awards ceremony which they also create completely by themselves. These students now have the expertise to film important events such as the Holiday Show and the Prom Fashion Show

A Real Mess

Students with medical problems and injuries run to the nurse's office when they need help, but one day in particular sticks out in Mrs. Joseph's mind. On a very icy morning a couple of winters ago, school had not been cancelled. Consequently, most students began walking to school, but it was a little icier than expected.

Thirty kids showed up in the nurse's office at once with cuts and bruises from falling on the ice. "It was a real mess," Mrs. Joseph recalls. She ended up sending many students to the hospital for stitches and the rest were bandaged up and sent to homeroom. Little did she know that within a couple of minutes school would be cancelled and all those injured kids would have to attempt to make another journey on the ice to get back home.

Planning Futures

It's no easy task planning your future, whether it be career or college. That's why it's nice to know that we have guidance counselors. Mrs. Murray states her job is "focusing the students in the right direction for the future, mainly their careers, based on their interests."

The students may not realize it, but the secretaries in the guidance office are a big help. Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Hirsh type correspondences and answer phones while keeping the office running smoothly and helping with college applications. By doing this work, the secretaries are saving the guidance counselors hours of work so that they can spend more time helping students.

The guidance office is here for the students. That's why, according to Mrs. McGarritty, "Students should be aware of what we do because it's for them. We're here to help them make the right decisions. When they do make the right decisions, they'll be set for life."

"Baby Think It Over"

A brand new idea hit the health and family life courses this year. Led by Mrs. Viviano and Mrs. Fadool, the project "Baby Think It Over" was a great success. Sixteen health students took responsibility for simulated infants who cried intermittently during the day. Mrs. Viviano remarked, "Both Mrs. Fadool and I agreed the project created real awareness of parenting. In addition, many students became very attached to their babydoll, including many of the guys who participated."

Students learned first hand some of the problems involved with taking care of an infant. Some of them lost sleep at home from dysfunctional babydolls. Other students commented they would definitely want a partner to help them parent. Shown here are Lisa Sommer and Amanda Vano showing that as a good parent you must be playful and affectionate with your baby. The babydoll unit brought a fresh, successful idea to the high school, giving young students a wake up call to the real world of parenting.

Construction for a Grade

Where would you go to seek a student who could build your dream house? For Mr. Patton's architectural drawing students, the answer is a simple one: See one of them! In order to also see these talented students design floor plans, using the computer as an aid, Mr. Patton's class is the place to visit.

Architectural drawing is the third-year elective of the technical drawing program. The semester long course culminates in a final project: a scale model of a house designed by each student.

Although, at first, the atmosphere in this class seems relaxed, any visitor will notice the walls covered with abundant student work. Shelves full of model homes created by previous students line the classroom. These models exemplify what current students desire to create. Even a quick glance at a student's work shows evidence of precision and technical drawing techniques learned previously.

Obviously, when Mr. Patton states, "We have some of the most creative whiz-bangs in Mt. Lebanon," he knows the work they create shows their talent for technical drawing.

Preparing for a Healthier Future

Why is health credit important for high school graduation? The answer becomes clear after being enrolled. The concepts taught are very important to our futures. Two skills involve healthy dieting and CPR. By the end of the course, students go on a field trip to the grocery store to learn nutritional labelling and they also become certified in cardiopulmonary resuscitation. These are essential for long and healthy living.

Resources: Not Just Pen and Paper

No Longer Prehistoric

In the depths of our school lies Mt. Lebanon's greatest center of knowledge: The library. Since the closing of the public library a few years ago, the high school library has become more important. Not only is it open during the day, but is also available for public use at night. The library is not only a place for books, but also contains a vast array of resources.

One example includes computers, including the CD Newsbank software, where students can tap a world of knowledge which otherwise would be difficult to obtain. This instant access program provides full-text articles which cover issues and events from around the world. This program is updated monthly so it is quite accurate and complete.

Another resource in the library is the video room. Students in some English classes must write exhaustive research papers. This activity enables students to take advantage of the many resources located in the library. They begin by going to the electronic card catalogue to look up books. Then they tap into the rest of the resources by viewing filmstrips to get another view point and possibly viewing an actual interview with an author. The process is enhanced by the wonderful invention known as the copy machine. This machine enables students to have a personal copy of the information they need which is especially important when using reference books. Tapping into old and new library resources is made possible with the help of a knowledgeable librarian, Ms. Maxeiner, and her assistants, Ms. Barnett and Ms. Lackner.

The Caring Hosts

The Allegheny Intermediate Unit sponsors the Hearing Impaired Support Program which administers to the needs of the hearing impaired. Students from surrounding school districts come to our school for this valuable resource.

One major goal of this program is to offer each student an appropriate language and communication skills program within the least restrictive environment. Students participate in mainstream classrooms with the assistance of sign language interpreters. Classroom instruction also facilitates personal development as well as independent living skills.

In this picture, Ms. McCracken, one of the instructors, poses with Richard Cook Gaffney III at the end of a productive day.

Beyond the Classroom: Not Just Academics

A School without Dances?

Are you kidding? A school that has absolutely no social events throughout the year? Well, if we didn't have an Activities Office, this might be the case.

Daily, students work in the office with Mrs. Ball and Mrs. Abbott planning activities such as school dances, charitable fundraising events, and pep rallies. Creative and eager, student council members efficiently work to make these social events successful enough to rouse participation and school spirit.

Every year, much of the efforts of these people go unnoticed. In fact, they deserve a thank you for all of the time and effort which goes into pulling off these popular activities. Could you even imagine if Homecoming Dance was cancelled because two few people wanted to organize and plan the dance? Well, just remember this consequence the next time you're in Center Court and you have a couple minutes to spare. Just stop in and say, "Thank you!"

A Break from our Day!

The cafeteria is a place for students to unleash their academic frustrations. Thanks must be given to the cafeteria staff who makes this possible.

This dedicated clan puts together well balanced meals for students. This, in turn, gives them the necessary energy which carries them through the afternoon. Operating punctually everyday, they manage to transform a large empty room into an enjoyable place for relaxation. Also, by their friendliness, they turn a bunch of weary students into energetic scholars. When leaving the lunchroom, one student recalls always taking a little piece of sunshine when given a warm goodbye by cafeteria staff person. One cafeteria worker Sue Johnston says, "Our students are a great source of pride for me."

Gateway to Competition.

Before athletes can participate in a school affiliated sports, they must pass through procedures outlined by Mr. Relich, Supervisor of Health and Physical Education and Ms. Folino. These two are dedicated to the smooth operation of athletic events. This includes everything from scheduling games, planning letter banquets, collecting medical and parent forms to rescheduling cancelled events. Not Pictured: Ms. Carol Unger

The Wizard of Oz.

The magic of audio-visual resources emanates from a few small rooms sectioned from the library. With Ms. Mary Ann Furry's knowledge of films and videotapes and Mr. Brad May's technical expertise, people who want to utilize AV equipment in the high school and district wide activities find it easier than following the yellow brick road. Occasionally, these folks stop to discuss the current state of Kansas with school psychologist, Mr. Rich Haggerty.

People: Not Just Faces in the Crowd

Picture this: You are dismissed from math class on your first day of school as a freshman. As you walk down the hall, you are bombarded by people you have never seen before in your life ... You can't help but ask, "Who are all these PEOPLE? With all these faces, I'm lost in a crowd."

As a freshman, you lack identity. Sure, you know who you are and what you like to do, but only your close friends know you. Entering the high school scene can be rough, but students develop a unique identity during their four years at Mt. Lebanon.

The PEOPLE walking Lebo hallways are all individuals. Their activities, organizations, and sports mold them. For example, incoming freshmen might play soccer in the fall. As the high school years go by, their identities as soccer players stick. Regardless of the activity, PEOPLE associate you with others in that activity.

Becoming associated with a group is part of taking on an identity in high school.

Appearance also signifies PEOPLE's identities. Those involved in athletics may sport tennis shoes and athletic duds, while members of the art club may enjoy tie dyes and accessories with a flare.

Others may enjoy wearing T-shirts denoting their favorite vacation spots or sport heros. By looking past the faces in the crowd and noticing individuality, you will see a myriad of self-expression.

We, the PEOPLE of Mt. Lebanon High School, are not just faces in a crowd. Finding an identity may be a difficult task, but with organizations, sports, and, most importantly, our own reflections, we can be more than just faces in the crowd.

"We all come in as freshmen searching for an identity, but we graduate as individuals — not just faces in a crowd."

— Amber Geyer

PEOPLE may walk out of Mt. Lebanon's doors in a crowd, but, in that crowd, each student is distinctly individual. Here, students leaving school exhibit different tastes, styles, and personalities.

A New Life

"I'm meeting my friends for lunch."

One of the most important social times in the school day is lunchtime. During this period, we enjoy chatting with our pals, commenting on our day, or maybe just catching up on our "home" work. But what might go unnoticed are those bonds of friendship which form during lunch periods. To an outsider, this picture might look like an ordinary day in the cafeteria for these girls, but to them, it stands out in their minds as more significant: a time to enjoy friendship.

"It's Activities Day in Center Court"

Every year, a day is devoted to informing students about extracurricular clubs and organizations. Students are bound to find an interest which suits their needs because of the wide variety of activities offered. A major accomplishment of freshman year is finding that special niche where he or she will feel comfortable participating in a chosen activity. This eager bunch of freshmen carefully reviews a particular club. Hopefully, involvement will pave a new path during their high school days.

"I love donut holes!"

Once a year during the month of October, a door decorating contest is held, promising pizza to the senior HR that comes up with the creepiest- door. However, every HR that participates enjoys a sugar-filled treat: donut holes!

This freshman has just finished hanging orange and black streamers from the ceiling and is now taping pumpkin lights around the doorway. With assistance from fellow classmates, this entry way will be transformed into a haunted space. Others take note: see these enthusiastic freshmen becoming involved. They are practicing to become the winners of the pizza lunch in October of 1999!

"Who has school spirit?"

Which class has the most school spirit? Apparently, this year's sophomore class. They look prepared for the pep rally. This SOPHOMORE sign seems to be the work of many tenth graders who also provided abundant gym decor. Why their incredible school spirit seems to be just bursting off of this page. Congratulations to the sophomore class for creativity and teamwork!

"Blood, sweat, and toil."

The extremely popular Mt. Lebanon letter jacket can be earned in a number of ways. Some students earn a letter by playing and excelling in a varsity sport; others manage a team. Members of the band and orchestra earn letters, also. To many individuals, the letter jacket symbolizes a proud achievement, a goal realized. So, the next time you see a student donning his or her letter jacket, remember the sweat and toil that person experienced in order to receive such an honorable award.

"Is that Jeff Goldblum in a

Sophomore Matt Bookman displays his school spirit on a student-initiated spirit day: Jeff Goldblum Day. On this day, students pinned pictures of the actor, star of Independence Day and Jurassic Park, on their shirts. Students who initiated this spirit day wanted to express spirit and appreciation for the actor. Matt Bookman is dressed in black to look exactly like Jeff Goldblum, a feat which he carries off quite successfully.

Bungee Jumping Down Under

Can an AFS student from Mt. Lebanon seek new friends and adventure in New Zealand? Certainly! Sophomore Kim Stolkowski, shown here plunging into a ravine, has only a bungee cord to save her. Kim spent two summer months living with a family in New Zealand and two weeks in an Outdoor Adventure program there. Introduced to an entirely different culture, Kim experienced the independence that many teenagers long for. Teenagers often try to seek their identities. International exchange programs seem helpful in this process.

JUNIORS

Mid-Life Crisis

"Meet me in Center Court"

Center Court serves as a social magnet during the school day. This open area fills quickly during those extra ten minutes after lunch. Apparently, Ben Winschel likes to use this time to relax before his 6th period American Lit class. Throughout the day, students gravitate toward Center Court to socialize and blow off a little steam during a hard day.

"See you at lunch!"

The full-period lunch provides juniors a break from the popular rigors of junior classes, such as physics and United States history. Whether fourth period "brunch" or fifth or sixth period lunch, juniors stick together, socializing and relaxing. Some lunch tables even celebrate birthdays, as friends like to surprise each other with cakes, cookies, or coveted lunch cuisine, such as Chinese or fast food. After throwing away empty brown bags and styrofoam plates, students talk, joke, and sometimes do last minute "home"work. These junior girls cherish their lunchtime and the chance to be with friends who may not be in any of their classes.

Mixed Metaphors

Who doesn't think juniors have a creative touch? Well, it seems that Ms. Lawrence's homeroom comes through with flying colors. For the Halloween door decorating contest, they decided to forego the orange jack-o-lanterns and black cats by getting a jump on Easter. These pastel colors certainly do give it a quite different appeal. These students must be commended for their creative minds.

Remembering our Friend Laurie Lust

Born three days apart and separated by only six houses, Laurie and I were close from the day we met until the day the ambulance carried away her precious body. With the same stringy brown ponytails, curious brown eyes, and lanky bruised legs, we were seldom apart and often mistaken for one another. My bitterness has slowly been eased by the power of time. However, the moment the ambulance disappeared around the corner, I realized our friendship was blessed. After all, there is no better friend than an angel.

—Heather, Laurie's friend

Together, my friends and I cried for Heather who lost Laurie, the friend who shared her childhood dreams and memories. After providing Heather support and comfort during the initial period of shock, I walked home through the neighborhood. Seeing their houses, I pictured them in pig-tails, walking hand in hand wearing their moms' old high heels and tripping over the cracks in the sidewalk. From the treehouse fort, they fought away all the bad guys together. In the front lawn, they held tea parties and picnics for their Cabbage Patch dolls. This quiet and calm neighborhood was their entire world. As their houses slowly disappeared from my sight, I wept for a great friendship that would no longer be.

—Jill, Laurie's friend

You hold a block of metal in your hand. And it is solid. Yet, inside the metal, there are molecules and atoms, all moving by laws of their own. Press a block of pure gold against a block of silver. When you separate them they seem unchanged. But a good physical chemist will show you that where they have been in contact. Invisible flecks of gold have wandered across the barrier of structure and buried themselves somehow, in the structure of the silver.

I think when people are pressed close they act the same way. Part of you enters them, part of them enters you. Long after you forget names and faces, they are still a part of you. Sometimes, it's frightening to think every person you have ever known...is part of you. But so is every person you have ever learned from, every friend you've ever had.

—Author Unknown

I'd like the memory of me to be a happy one.
I'd like the tears of those who grieve to dry before the sun.
Remember the happy memories I leave behind ....

"Two friends, two bodies with one soul inspired."

—Homer

"Give me one friend, just one, who meets the needs of all my varying needs."—Esther M. Clark

"Keep your face to the sunshine and you cannot see the shadow."

—Helen Keller

"There is a land of the living and a land of the dead and the bridge is love, the only survival, the only meaning."

—Thornton Wilder

"There are many shadows, but remember, where there is a shadow there must be a light."

LIFE

IT'S NOT ALL BLACK & WHITE

"I cannot live my LIFE and explain it at the same time." —
Unknown

LIFE

LIFE

"One should count
each day a separate LIFE".

Seneca

"LIFE is thirst."

Leonard
Michaels

"LIFE
is short.
Play hard."

Reebok

LIFE

LIFE

"The purpose of
LIFE is to live it, to reach out eagerly and without fear for newer
and richer experiences."

Eleanor

Roosevelt

"A LIFE spent making mistakes is not only more honorable but more useful than a LIFE spent doing nothing."

George
Bernard
Shaw

"It
isn't
LIFE that matters;
it's the courage
you bring to
it."

Hugh Walpole

"Our LIFE is frittered away by detail...Simplify!
Simplify!"
Thoreau

"LIFE is what happens
while you are making other plans." - John Lennon

"It is through ordinary accomplishments
that we add luster
to LIFE."
Stanhope, Earl of Chester-

T w o

hundred and six pages ago, we said, "LIFE at
Mt. Lebanon High School is NOT ALL BLACK & WHITE." The school year has come to end. Seniors will embark on to new lives after graduation while underclassmen return after exciting summers.
This school year has been a study in different shades, hues, and colors; each student sees the year in a different light. Interactions with administrators, teachers, as well as each other,
have given us new experiences to pass on to others. At the beginning of each school year, we each seem a shade of gray, but, in the end, we become a kaleidoscope of brilliance in a COLOR ME HIGH SCHOOL!

Colophon

More than just time goes into the LOG, and the colophon is a chance for us, the editors, to tell you about the process of making a yearbook. Ultravision, a software program by Taylor, is the program by which all copy and layouts for the sixty-seventh volume of the LOG were designed. Our computer tools include a Pentium computer by Vektron and a 5MP Laser Jet Printer by Hewlett Packard. We also added a Pentium computer by DW and a 5L Laser Jet Printer by Hewlett Packard to our workspace to facilitate needed computer time.

The 1997 LOG was printed by Taylor Publishing Company in Malvern, PA, with a press run of 216 pages and 1250 copies. We used premium 80# enamel paper with 32 pages of 4-color with the use of combination screens throughout the opening section. In addition, there were 16 pages of All-American Red spot color. The 4-color cover features matte lamination and additional foil stamping in silver shatter foil. Special school designed endsheets were printed in two colors (Black and All-American Red) on premium talc colored Passport Stock. Seville standard was chosen as the typeface for all body copy and captions, and Seville bold was used for headlines. Seville italic added emphasis in the 4-color senior section.

Thanks to Dr. Offutt for her expertise and for dinner at Il Pizzaiolo. You were always a big help, and we'll leave here possessing many great skills we have picked up throughout the time and long Saturday mornings spent working on the yearbook.

The official photographer of the LOG, Michael Good, helped to make our organization and faculty pictures great. Thanks for taking time out of your busy schedule. Mike Good also took the amazing picture on the yearbook's cover and the senior stadium picture.

The Business staff, led by Julie Bennett, made LOG week run smoothly.

Dorothy and Bob Albright taught us a great deal at the summer seminar at Seven Springs. Dorothy also showed up at school whenever we needed her to revise our spreads and pay attention to the small details!

We also need to give ourselves a big thanks for hours upon hours of work spent in the LOG office. Andrea is responsible for the fantastic Student Life and Organizations sections. Julie put together the fabulous People and Academics sections. And Adrienne slaved over the Sports section and Senior Directory, making them incredible.

We hope you enjoy the 1997 LOG: Definitely NOT ALL BLACK & WHITE!
