English department forces students to relate literature to their lives

From the common assessments to the grading scale, Mt. Lebanon students often complain about the English department. However, this department is about much more than grading scales and timed writing. It teaches us all a skill that we will utilize for the rest of our lives, and it also encompasses some of the school's clubs and organizations. Pulse, the literary magazine, is headed by English teacher Mr. Mysliwczyk. The magazine has expanded to not only cover creative writing, but those students who write and produce music. The school newspaper, The Devil's Advocate and the yearbook are also produced through the English department. The classes themselves have great importance as well. Mr. Ben Minett, said, "It really helps you, in a real sense, handle life." He went on to say that English class is not truly about creating life-long readers but more about teaching students important skills that we will use no matter what we choose to do in life. Minett said, "For the rest of a student's life, no matter what path they choose, they will have to analyze information, choose which of it is important, and deeply understand it." However, class is not meant to be entirely serious. "I try to incorporate jokes into class as much as possible," Minett said. "I purposely try to break down social barriers, and it's my opinion that learning best occurs when the students and teacher are open to one another."

Fallon King (10), Azfar Merchant (10), Caroline Bushman (10), and Mackenzie Franklin (10) give a presentation in class. Mackenzie played Harry Potter and the others characters offered her advice regarding power.

Freshmen Matt Stone, Zhao Ma, Joe Wilkinson and Trenten Montensino enjoy discussing To Kill a Mockingbird in Mrs. Nicole Glover's Honors 9 English class.

The purpose of the activity was to analyze the images and trends in magazine, particularly Seventeen for this group.

Juniors from Mr. Paul LaQuatra's 'Conflict in America' course convene in the hall to recite Mark Twain's "The War Prayer," which identifies the hypocrisy between praying to win wars while simultaneously supporting the destruction of the opponents' lives and cause.

Michael Garbett (12) works diligently in one of the writing lab rooms.

Mr. Peter Bouvy introduced the idea of a "Flipped Classroom" to Mt. Lebanon's math program. The idea of watching the lectures at home and doing the homework in class is appealing to many students. Here, Bouvy helps Mark Vrabel (10) with his homework. Mr. Bouvy was recognized for his work by the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette in early January.

Math department helps students solve problem

Emma Schoonmaker (10) prepares for her Algebra 2 final in Mrs. Amanda Cheque's class by bouncing solutions off of her groupmates. As with any other math final, studying is a must to receive a good grade.

The Math Department of Mt. Lebanon High School strives to give students the tools and knowledge that they need to succeed in their professional lives. The staff is committed to assisting students in conquering all stages of the math courses provided. Because of these traits, students from Mt. Lebanon tend to have a greater deal of success in the math portions of their SAT and ACT tests. Math courses vary in difficulty, ranging anywhere from a basic geometry course, to Honors Linear Algebra, AP BC Calc and the dreaded AP Stat. Regardless of the difficulty level, the math teachers are a very supportive and professional group, sure to help any and all students to succeed in their mathematics courses. The staff also attempts to utilize and incorporate the most recent and useful forms of technology. As with most math courses, students are taught not only to retain knowledge but also find reasonable applications of this knowledge. The four years of high school mathematics provide a substantial base for those who plan to complete some level of higher education and the rest of a student's life. You may not go on to be a mathematician, but Mt. Lebanon's math program will surely prepare you for what lies ahead in your math future.

Students show passion for science

The high school provides students with many different science courses and electives. Electives are more detailed than general courses, which focuses on specific areas of study, rather than the mandatory year-long courses. From Anatomy to Physics, the high school offers every elective an aspiring scientist can take. Most course can be taken at the academic or honors level including five advanced placement classes. The curriculum emphasizes the use of technology and laboratory experience, providing the students with a more hands-on course. An additional class period is provided to students on lab days so they have plenty of time to prepare and conduct the lab correctly. Mt. Lebanon supplies each class with exciting labs. For example, the Anatomy elective dissects cats and the Biology course dissects frogs and squid. The courses also take learning outside of the regular classroom by participating in Mole Day and the Genetics Conference.

Social studies department peers at past to learn for future

Mention the real rules of major league baseball to Mr. Merriman during his roughly-baseball-themed review game, and he will deduct points. Take too long to answer a question, and you'll be hit, softly, with a foam cube. History teachers at Mt. Lebanon work creatively to teach thousands of years of facts, events, names, places, dates and theory to students in all grades, taking a variety of subjects. Whether it's your second semester senior year in Economics, Civics as a freshman right out of middle school, or AP US History consuming your free time, the subject matter covered is consistently in-depth and exciting. War? We've got that. Domestic politics? Sure, have as much as you want. Globalization? More and more every year. Funny names for obscure African countries? If Djibouti isn't satisfying enough, you better stay a while longer. [Richard the] Lion[hearted], tiger [mothers], and bear [markets], oh my!

Students Get Physical in Health & PE and Stay Technical in B.I.T

Mt. Lebanon High School has a reputation for academic excellence, but Lebo students are just as keen on breaking a sweat in the gym or getting tech savvy in Info Tech and B.I.T. Over the course of their freshman and sophomore years students try their hands at everything from soccer and badminton to swimming and frisbee in gym. Upperclassmen who are more physically inclined may also elect to take Seasonal Sports, a class that takes physical education to the next level and puts a sharper focus on specific sports. Meanwhile freshmen are required to take a semester-long computer literacy course to hone their typing skills.

Fine Arts Department encourages creativity

The many classes offered in the Fine Arts at Mt. Lebanon include, Art, Theatre, Tech Theatre, Orchestra, Band, Choir, Music Tech, Dance, and TV Production. These classes offer a way for students to be creative during their regular academic day. The usual mediums that are worked with in Art class would be paint, clay, charcoal, and various other objects. Mairin Plant, a sophomore enrolled in Art 2, said, "it is fun and creative; a very nice way to let off steam." She also finds the environment to be very relaxed and is able to connect with many of the other students in the art room. In Theatre class, you will find a really welcoming and crazy environment. Kelli Cochran, a sophomore in Theatre 1, says, "Mrs. Schrenier is the sweetest person and feels that she wants all of us to succeed in life and in theatre." Cochran really enjoys theatre due to its unique class experience. Besides acting, students have the ability to help create the behind the scenes action and sets while taking Tech Theatre. In TV Production, students learn the correct way to film and edit different scenes such as news packages with teacher Mrs. Kramer. Fine Arts also include orchestra, band, choir, music tech and dance class, helping students to experience the music spectrum of the arts. Students at Mt. Lebanon have many options to expand their creative ability and to discover new things that would not have been exposed to otherwise.

Language students immerse themselves in global cultures

All of the language classes offered at Mt. Lebanon culture students and help them gain knowledge of other countries around the world. Language proves a vital part of almost every students school day.

Sofia Garman (9) and Ashlea Anne Rosnick (10) participate in their Spanish class's review game. The white boards prove as learning tool as opposed to raising hands or shouting out answers.

“Edu-creation”

Tech-ed department gets crafty

Tech Ed includes some of the more popular classes at the high school. Students who want to show how creative they are get the chance to experience CAD, Architectural or Engineering Drawing, Architectural & Engineering Design, CISCO, Manufacturing & Production, Graphic Communications, Applied Power Technology, and Applied Engineering. Kristen Powers, who has taken many of these classes, said, “I like the environment. It’s hand-on, learn it yourself.” She explained, “I took Shop One because I didn’t think I would have another opportunity like this outside of high school, but now it’s something I can see myself doing in the future.” The unique classes Mt. Lebanon offers has proven to influence many students. Whether it’s making new friends or planning your future, each Tech Ed class inspires students’ creativity and individuality.

Family consumer science students take the challenge

Relay for Life

Brian Morgenlander (12) leaps to catch a frisbee while taking a break from his station. Morgenlander's team set up a "prison," where participants could arrest each other for a minimum of $5. In total, the team raised over $1000 in less than 24 hours.

Mt. Lebanon's second Relay for Life was held on June 11-12, 2011. Relay for Life is a 24-hour event and is the American Cancer Society's largest fundraiser. The goal is to allow the community to celebrate, remember, and fight cancer together. A total of 83 teams, 1224 participants, and 93 cancer survivors participated in Relay. Overall, Mt. Lebanon raised $214, 136. Furthermore, Mt. Lebanon won the American Cancer Society's "All-American" Award, an award that recognizes a community that had commendable fundraising efforts, retention of participants, and strong leadership. Mt. Lebanon was one of nine communities to win this award in Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Relay for Life included participants ranging from babies to grandparents. The event is planned year-round by a committee that is headed by a member of the American Cancer Society, teachers, and student ambassadors from the high school. This committee meets regularly to keep track of team membership and fundraising. Events are also held year-round in order to promote the event and raise awareness of cancer. Teams were asked to raise $100 prior to the event and were required to set up a creative booth at the event in order to raise more money. Booths consisted of everything from selling t-shirts to face painting. Outside the track, teams sold homemade goods and local sponsors also donated food. Dedicated team members walked through the night and also pitched sleeping tents around the track for much needed rest. Mt. Lebanon's third Relay for Life will take place on June 9-10 at the high school stadium.

Katie Katz (11) and graduated sisters Jenny and Amy visited the Columbia Icefields in Jasper, Alberta, which is located in western Canada. Katie said the trip with her sisters was fun, and the highlight was seeing five bears.

Bursting the bubble...

Lebo's Summer Adventures

Summer, a time for relaxing and kicking back with no homework and no worries. While some kids spent their time swimming and tanning at the Lebo pool, others took the summer as an opportunity to burst the bubble. One specific group of people, St. Anne's Teen Life Club, traveled to Logan, West Virginia to help repair houses and take care of kids who had difficult home lives. Teresa Swindal (11), one of the volunteers on the trip said, "It showed me another way of looking at what I have and showed me how lucky I really am." Teresa also thought that "getting out of the bubble was very healthy and eye opening." Over on the other side of the pond, in London, England, Gabriella Hudson (11) and her sister Giselle spent two months touring England and Holland, while visiting her family and friends. The girls visited London five times, went to the London Eye, Big Ben and Buckingham Palace. The most memorable part of busting the bubble was being in Trafalgar Square for the premier of Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows Part 2. Even though some trips can be leisurely, Katie Parish (11), volunteered at vacation bible school for her church. "I like little kids and I needed the service hours." Parish and the four and five year old kids played games and did crafts. Parish said, "I had to wake up early, it was kind of a bummer. But...not that bad." But for the rest of us who stayed home all summer, we just got to creep the pictures on Facebook.

Setting sail...

Class of 2012's Senior Boat Ride a big hit

Mt. Lebanon's senior class of 2012 had its own annual Senior Boat Ride on Sept. 25, 2011. As the Steelers played an early-season game against the Indianapolis Colts, Mt. Lebanon's seniors spent their Sunday night setting sail on the Ohio, Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers, making their way along the banks of Downtown Pittsburgh and Mt. Washington.

Aboard the ship, controversy ran rampant, as some students and administrators grew uncomfortable with the new-age "grinding" dancing style, which many seniors happily took part in throughout the event. The suggestive "dirty dancing" prompted outrage from parents and was one of the high school's most talked about controversies during the fall and winter.

Despite the controversy, seniors still had a fun time bonding with their fellow classmates. During the night, students could dance, take pictures, and relax on deck while spending time with their friends. Many boys sported colored suits and jackets, and one was even dressed as MC Hammer. All in all, it was an experience for this year's seniors to bond aboard the Gateway Clipper and an event that started off their last of four years together.

At the end of the night, the seniors gathered around the dance floor while their senior song was announced. As "You Make My Dreams Come True" by Hall and Oates boomed through the speakers, the senior class joined in together and danced to their senior song. Although senior boat ride had its dramatic downturns, it was an experience that students won't forget as they begin their journeys separately after graduation.

A group of juniors, including Teresa Swindal, Emilia Ricciuti, Kathleen Weston, Rebecca Twinney, Marissa Lutz, and Julia Teti, carry the banner for the Class of 2013.

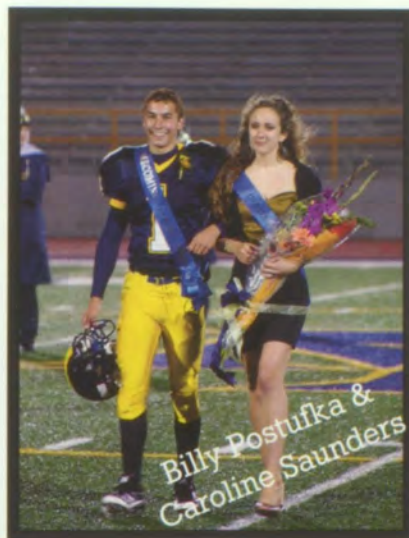

On an unusually cold and rainy September night, Mt. Lebanon students were not wrapped up in a blanket with their favorite movie on; rather, flocks of students attended the white-out filled with anticipation as they wait for the class of 2012 king and queen to be announced. Even though the weather was dreary, each grade showed their school pride at the parade prior to the game and pumped up the crowd. The students stayed strong and cheered on while the seven homecoming court couples walked down the field with permanent smiles on their faces. After each couple presented themselves, treasurers Rachel Sharbaugh and Ian Dempsey took the microphone and made the announcement that everyone had been waiting for. Principal Brian McFeeley crowned Tyler Anderson and Kristen Powers 2012 homecoming king and queen. After the announcements were made, the game started against Penn Trafford. Unfortunately, our Blue Devils were defeated 34-17.

Pink Out

Mt. Lebanon's Pink Out has become an honored tradition since its start in 2009.

Following the loss of a community member to breast cancer, the student body responded with an idea to raise awareness. Starting with football games, fans displayed pink throughout the stadium, as well as band members, cheerleaders, and players.

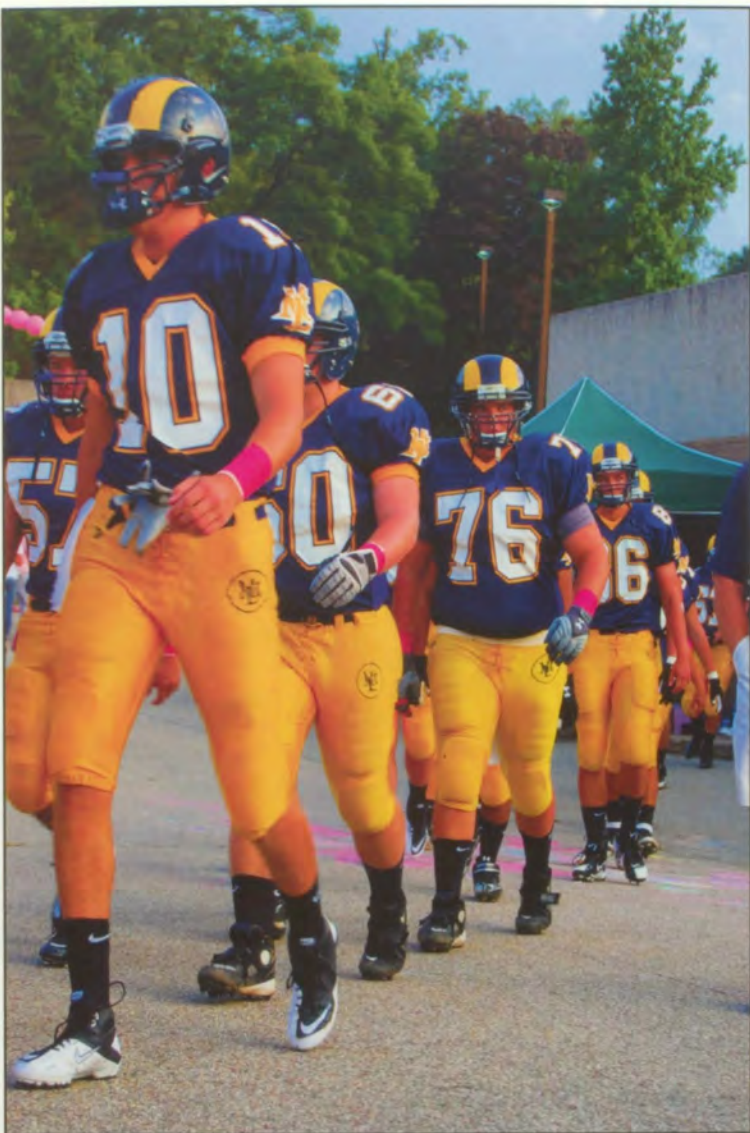

Soon after the first event, other sports at the high school jumped on the band wagon, showing their support for the cause.

Following Mt. Lebanon's successful experience, more than 70 schools throughout Western Pennsylvania started their own Pink Outs, generating widespread awareness of breast cancer. This tradition caught the attention of ABC's Everyday Health, leading them to honor its founder, former student Ellese Meyer. The show's crew visited Mt. Lebanon on the day of the Pink Out, capturing the enthusiasm firsthand.

What started as a student's way of honoring her mother rapidly expanded into a statewide celebration of breast cancer awareness that will live on throughout the future of Mt. Lebanon High School.

L-E-B-O, LEBO,LEBO LET'S GO

Spirit Week, which is traditionally the week before the football game against USC, brought a variety of fun to the ordinary school day. From twin day to lax bro day, students showed their enthusiasm by dressing up. On Friday, everyone filed out of the school and headed to the turf to compete in the annual elementary school games. The seven Mt. Lebanon schools and St. Bernards competed in dodge ball, relay races, and the tug-of war to determine which elementary school would reign supreme. The spirit assembly ended with a frisbee and dog show, which kept kids in their seats past the typical 3:03 p.m. dismissal.

The administration this year began to vocalize concerns about grinding. This shot of Sydney Isaacs (12) and Kyle Breslow (12) was featured in the Devil's Advocate to show that grinding doesn't have to be X-rated.

Seniors Julia Gitelman, Clare Martin, Megan Gardner, Mandy Setcavage, Kenzie Milner, Eli Hoyek, Reese Eckenrode and Jack Faett fall in line to strike a pose at their final Homecoming dance. By senior year, the dance is less about dates and crushes and more about having fun with friends.

Maddie Jones (9), a Keystone Oaks student, Megan Sadderfield (9) and Amanda Fishman (9) show off their formalwear. Freshmen are often overwhelmed by the sheer number of tasks leading up to the dance, from setting dinner reservations to organizing pre-dance pictures. The exciting evening, most agree, is worth the stress.

Homecoming 2011

Under the Sea

The "Under the Sea" theme of this year's Homecoming Dance was more fitting than anyone could have possibly expected. Around 7:00, hundreds of students received texts from student council representatives reporting of a pipe leak within the building. Consequently, when the masses arrived in their mini-dresses and button-downs, they were redirected around the slippery floors of the Fine Arts Wing. From there, though, it was all smooth sailing. The decorations committee went all out, transforming Center Court and its surrounding hallways into an underwater wonderland, and the dance floor was packed and overheated as per usual. Luckily, nobody "drowned" in the mob of students!

Move, move, shake, shake, now DROP. These were the instructions. They asked us if we wanted to "kick it in the backseat," but we told them "what we wanted, what we really really wanted." And that was to "make our dreams come true!" For girls, the day-long screaming fight with our mothers over last-minute dress and hair issues was well worth the stress. And boys, thanks for showering.

Seth Kweicen (11) and Liz Anderson (11) smile big as they take a breather from the dance floor.

SENIOR PLEDGE DAY

Senior Pledge Day is an annual fundraiser sponsored by the senior class. It is a great opportunity to raise money for various senior events like the senior picnic, senior shirts, and prom. This year the senior class raised $1200, which is a tremendous amount compared to previous years. Besides senior sponsored events, this money is also distributed to the Holiday Show and various charities. Senior Pledge Day allows underclassmen to buy seniors and dress them up, sometimes as various pop artists like Justin Bieber or Taylor Swift. Costumes from the day included a cat, trash can, Dorothy from the Wizard of Oz, and an Oompa Loompa. Seniors get into character throughout the day and act their specific costume. Some have to sing songs, rap, or perform dances.

Sciulli had to dance through the halls in her fat ballerina suit. She had many struggles throughout the day, including not being able to walk up stairs and making others carry her backpack.

Students give back to the community through service

At the beginning of every year, students attend the Community Service day held in center court. Students often sign up for helping at their elementary school fundraisers, working at the Hundred Acre Manor's haunted house, and many other helpful tasks. Although it is not a graduation requirement, students often choose to give back to the community for their own benefits. Whether it's helping at a Teen Center or wrapping gifts for the Toys for Tots drive, kids frequently find themselves doing activities they enjoy. One of the best turnouts for community service is the Toys for Tots fundraiser. Each homeroom was assigned a child in need of gifts during the holiday season. With multiple students involved, everything was very successful. "It was great to see our homeroom come together to support someone our age who is less fortunate," said Erin Worden (11). A few students also helped out at the Mellon Middle School Teen Center and agreed it was a successful night. "It's gratifying to know that we could help at the event and make that night enjoyable for the kids," Will Tomer (11) said.

Holiday Show

This year's Holiday Show was a huge success, raising $7,500 dollars. Nearly $4,200 went to charity and the remaining funds went to the senior class. The annual show featured a variety of talents showcased for the entire school. Cheerleaders, Dance Company, Men's Ensemble, Triple Trio, and Senior Student Council returned this year to perform. They perform every year, but each performance is a new, highly anticipated song or dance. When students look back on this year's Holiday Show, they will remember the hilarious singing of "Kokomo" by the Beach Boyz, the passionate voice of sophomore A'Leisha Gibson, and the entertaining dance by Vitamin Beatz. Each performance received positive responses from the audience and from their peers. Each act had its own style and showed true unique talent.

A'Leisha Gibson (10) won the hearts of the audience with her cover of Beyonce's "If I Were a Boy." She later won the Devil's Advocate superlative for "Most Like Beyonce."

Teresa Grinko (11) and Caroline Byrne (11) danced to their own beat, performing at the Holiday Show for their first time ever. They have been Irish dancing for nine years.

Snowball 2012

Hawaiian Luau

An unseasonably warm February week kept students hopeful of a fair-weather weekend, but, on the Saturday morning of Snowball, an unforeseen heavy snowfall ensured the evening would be chilly as ever. Girls swapped their heels for Uggs as they and their dates trekked through the snow into restaurants for dinner. The chills subsided inside Center Court, where the pounding music combined with 600 dancing students upped the temperature—which was fitting for the beachy luau theme! Paper palm trees, balloons and leis turned the night into a temporary Hawaiian getaway.

Lebo students and teachers tell their stories with tattoos

Although they may look simple to onlookers, many Mt. Lebanon students and teachers have tattoos that represent something far greater than just a picture. The meaning behind each tattoo will remain forever.

Kaylee Van Duesen (11), her mom, and her older sister all share a tattoo on their feet of the Hindu symbol meaning karma. "It's a picture and a thousand different meanings," Van Duesen said. Instead of labeling themselves with a specific religion, "we just kind of believe to accept and do for others what you would want done for you. Be kind and kindness will come."

Jordan Solomon (11) got her tattoo of the tree of life on her back because "I had a lot of [bad] memories from eighth and ninth grade year that I didn't want to forget because I think it changed me a lot." She was 14 years old when she got her tattoo.

Evan Meyer (11) got his tattoo in eighth grade. His sister helped him decide to get it, in order to support and remember their mom.

Science teacher Mr. Matt Roddy got his monkey tattoo in the early 1990s, when "I was young and wild and did goofy things." His dad had a tattoo of a monkey, and he wanted the same tattoo as his father.

Van Duesen, Solomon, and Meyer all agree that their tattoos. "At the end it started to pinch. It almost tickled," Van Duesen said.

Solomon agrees. "It really didn't hurt. It was just intense vibrating." Meyer's tattoo took two to three hours and only hurt in some places. Each tattoo has an important meaning and will remain with them for the rest of their lives.

Jessica Armstrong (12) has a tattoo of a red robin, behind her ear, representing her mother Robin, along with three other tattoos. She got the tattoo when she was 17.

ETC bravely takes on the future

Evening Theatre Company, an elective in the Fine Arts Department, presented Aldous Huxley's Brave New World for their fall production. The show was directed by Mrs. Cindy Schreiner and assisted by student directors, Christa Federico and Rosemary Baird. "Brave New World," written in 1932, is a critical view of what our current society may have become. The lead characters were played by Hanna Vogel, Luke Steinhauer, Quinn Kobelak, CJ Ketchum, and Laura Cherner. ETC has been taught by Mrs. Cindy Schreiner for over 30 years. It is a program that is comparable to Pittsburgh's school of fine arts, CAPA. The students involved in ETC must take four semesters of theatre before taking the class, making them a tight knit group of people. This years ETC members have been known to have cast dinners and parties and even have a Turkey Bowl team.

Elena Smith (12) who plays Miss Keate and Laura Cherner (12) who plays Lenina are demonstrating the conformity of the utopian society.

Zoe Rising (11) plays a member of the utopian society in Evening Theatre's presentation of Aldous Huxley's Brave New World. The show was the fall production for the elective class taught by Mrs. Cindy Schreiner.

Luke Steinhauer (12) plays John the Savage, who is the native that is placed in the utopian society. In the end, Steinhauer's character jumps off a cliff to escape the pressure of society.

What once was the tennis courts is now a hard hat area. For the next 41 months, students have to watch as the campus transforms into a whole new facility.

The traditional LEBO sign on the hillside overlooking the football field remains, despite the destruction of the tennis courts and baseball fields directly above. Students have gotten used to seeing bulldozers as a part of the everyday scenery.

School digs in for start of renovation

Mt. Lebanon proudly displays their banner announcing the start of the renovation project.

No one can blame Mt. Lebanon for making a big deal over the start of the high school's renovation. It took nearly five years of planning and negotiating before the project finally began. It is the most significant overhaul the school will go through since 1920. Unfortunately, renovation comes with significant changes. Students lost their parking and were forced to park at either Dixon Field or the Lutheran Church on Washington Road. When Horseman Drive closed, students commute to school became significantly lengthened. Gym class played dodgeball in the hallways. Even though current students will carry the burden of renovation, they won't be able to reap the benefits. The first class to be renovation-free is the class of 2019, which is the current 5th graders.

PA legislature puts teen driving under microscope

In late September, Pennsylvania governor Tom Corbett signed a bill that drastically limits the driving freedom of teenagers across the state. Under the new law, drivers on their "junior licenses" under age 18 can only carry one non-family member in their cars with them at a time, unless a parent or legal guardian is also present.

One state legislator called the law "the most significant safe teen driving measures that we have had before us." The law makes a primary offense for a small child to ride without a car seat and for any passenger under 18 to omit a seatbelt. The law hasn't deterred teens fully, though; many still take caravans full of kids around town after school.

Left: Parking permits at the high school are doled out through a lottery process. Students who park without them are liable to receive a $20 ticket from Mt. Lebanon. Above: Pennsylvania governor Tom Corbett speaks about the state's teen driving bill in September. He also wants to fully ban texting while driving. (AP Photo.)

Kyle Smith (above; 12) and Emma Carson (left; 11) are among the thousands of American teenage drivers who simultaneously text friends and family while operating their vehicles. Texting while driving has proven to be a significant public health risk with studies estimating it makes drivers more than twice as likely to crash their cars than if they were completely undistracted. Pennsylvania's stringent teen driving law, enacted in the fall, did not expressly ban texting while driving, but a push to outlaw it across the state is gaining significant traction.

Forensics team doesn't do autopsies

Mt. Lebanon's forensics team members are among the hardest working group of students in the high school. With a season that starts in October and extends to the middle of June, the members of the team easily put in more hours practicing and performing than any other group at the high school.

October is a time for students to select and write their pieces and decide what events they will compete in. In December, the group competed at Princeton University. C.J. Ketchum and Hanna Vogel placed first in duo interpretation, and Keith Rentler placed second in humorous interpretation. In February, the team packed up and headed to the Harvard University Invitational, the largest forensics invitational in any English speaking country. Michal Cohen (12) placed fourth in original oratory.

This season, 11 students qualified for the state tournament. Nationals are held in June and each year, since 1997, Mt. Lebanon has been represented. This year's team is coached by Brenda Nascone, George Savarese, Pete DiNardo, Stephanie Mangan and Lisa Hoffmann.

Mock Trial Club

Lebo students compete as attorneys and witnesses

From the beginning of November to the end of January, Mt. Lebanon students met once or twice every week to work as part of the Mock Trial Club. After receiving the extensive court case, students are assigned roles as either attorneys or witnesses when it comes time to compete against another of the 34 school districts that participate in the mock trial competition. Each school has the possibility of advancing passed the first round to regionals, states, or even nationals.

The case this year was about an endangered species of turtles. In previous years, there have been cases ranging from robbery to murder.

The Mt. Lebanon club splits itself into two teams: defense and prosecution. Each team will have a different trial date in which it will compete against another school's defense or prosecution team.

Although the club requires a large time and work commitment, many Mt. Lebanon students enjoy their time bonding with their teammates and working together to advance to the next round.

Pulse is Lebo's literary magazine, but with Mr. Craig Myzliwecyk at the helm, it has gone multimedia. Students submit pieces of original poetry, literature, artwork and music. Its weekly meetings are a creative outlet where students come together to find a voice through their creative passions, critiquing on submissions and voting on whether or not pieces make the cut.

the devil's advocate

The Devil's Advocate is Mt. Lebanon's student newspaper. This year, the staff consisted of a record 58 students. Students work to create articles by going through an interview, writing, and editing process. The final product is then delivered to each homeroom once a month.

The AO and Library: Where a kid can be a kid

Even though Mt. Lebanon High School has the reputation of being pushing students to academical excellence, even hard working kids need a chance to take a break. Fortunately, there are several places students can go and just relax. The Activites Office, or AO, is the best thing seniors will get to having recess. During lunch and study halls, students can opt to hang out on the 6th floor and shoot pool, play foosball or just lounge on the comfy chairs. The AO is also home to the vending machines and all things social. Activities Director Carlie McGinty uses the space to organize activities from dances to pep rallies.

The library is also a secret get-away for all students. Sure, lots of kids go there to study, but the library is also a place to eat lunch, play on the new mac

Rumor has it...

Dance Company channels creativity and inspiration

Mt. Lebanon Dance Company, established in 1972 by dance teacher Cece Kapron, is more than an elective; for its members, it is a family. Dance Company is composed of 22 hand-selected girls, all of whom display a true passion and talent for dance. Each day during eighth period, all the company members, ranging from freshmen to seniors, are able to interact and rehearse together. Each girl contributes to the choreography, and dances are performed for audiences at the annual Holiday Show as well as at first semester Daytimes. During second semester, Dance Company prepares for their performance in the spring musical, which is "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

Outside of class, the girls typically bond over dinners and sleepovers. The amount of time spent together by Dance Company members truly makes the class unique.

Evening Theatre Company Goes to Gravel Gulch

"Shakespeare Goes to Gravel Gulch" was not just 12 weeks of rehearsing and performing a show. It was 12 weeks of building a bond with my castmates. "The ETC family this year is as strong as I have ever seen in my four years of high school," said senior Anthony DeAngelis. Unlike most classes ETC requires a lot more work and commitment outside of school. The second semester of ETC was different because the periods were split from 8th period to both 4th and 8th which inevitably made rehearsals longer. Seniors Keith Rentler and DeAngelis student directed "Shakespeare Goes to Gravel Gulch." This was their first semester student directing. "It was a lot harder than I thought it would be, but I definately enjoyed having that leadership role," said Rentler. "After Pride and Prejudice" and "Brave New World," it was refreshing to hear that we were doing a comedy, and that's when I realized I wanted to lend my comedic talents through student directing," said DeAngelis. Mrs. Schreiner decided to make the show a play within a play by adding a French director that would come out at random moments to yell at the cast and fix mistakes. The show featured Craig James Ketchum playing the role of the melodramatic villain and juniors Natalie Kindler and Caroline Connell (alternating casts), as his devious and beautiful accomplices. Overall, the entire cast grew as a family and put on the show of their lives.

Hungry, hungry high schoolers

It's homeroom on a Friday. You've made it through the week, but the next few hours will be draining. Oh, and you didn't have breakfast this morning. What are your options? A four-course meal, perhaps: 1. a fresh smoothie, 2. some donuts or a bagel, 3. homemade pickles and peppers and finally, 4. a cookie dough cupcake with chocolate ganache on top. That'll bring back any student from the dead. And better yet, all the proceeds from your various snack-capades will benefit various organizations - Student Council, a local business, the Forensics team. What's not to love about cheap, Mt. Lebanon-made food? The only thing that comes to mind is its ability to make you forget how average food tastes, to brainwash you into emptying your wallet every week in order to get your dosage of some more freshly-baked goodness, to convince you that you're doing it for a charity greater than your own stomach. But it's okay. We're all in the same predicament. We're accepting here. Eat your little heart out.

Drumline and percussion takes center stage

Drumline and the percussion ensemble are the nerdiest nerds of the nerd herd. Just kidding! They're awesome. Drumline kids spend multiple hours a week practicing for their multiples show including football games, holiday shows, and other festivals. Drumline is made up of four different lines of instruments, the snares, the tenors, the base drums, and the symbols. An audition is required to be placed into drumline. Throughout the years move around from symbols, to base drums, to tenors, or snares. Drumline kids also know how to play all percussion instruments, like the marimba. This year they took the stage for the annual holiday show playing the set they usually do at the halftime show.

Left: Jessie Cohen (11), playing the snare drum, and Anna Wadhvani (10), playing the symbols, participate at the fall spirit assembly which was held outdoors.

The group also is close with each other outside of school.

Percussion ensemble, which also includes Drumline, is also made up of a bunch of other ensembles. The Percussion Front, more commonly referred to as the pit, is featured mostly during the halftime shows at football games. The percussion front play marimbas, xylophones, tympany and much more. Another part of percussion is the Concert Ensemble. They mostly perform around the holidays and at the end of the school year. Each year, the Concert Ensemble plays around the city of Pittsburgh. Before either of those, most people start out in the Training Ensemble. Mostly for the freshmen, this gives them the opportunity to practice and get prepared for high quality performances. Drumline and percussion really made an unforgettable bang this year.

Mt. Lebanon hits to slopes in Vermont

This year the Lebo Ski & Board Club travelled 616 miles to Warren, Vermont where they played Catch Phrase, ate Ben & Jerry's and watched movies. And they skied at elevations above 3950ft above sea level in minus 5-degree weather. Mr. Schrader, Mr. D'Alo, Mr. Bouvy and Mr. Kuskil took 50 kids to Vermont this winter and started their journey with a 14 hour bus ride through the northeast, only stopping for Steak & Shake and frequent bathroom breaks. The skiers passed the time watching movies, listened to iPods and tried to rest for their first 9 hour skiing day starting directly after they arrived in Vermont the next morning. "The trip was long, but as soon as we got on the slopes the next morning I realized that it was totally worth it," said junior snowboarder Caroline Plante.

When the ski club finally reached Sugarbush resort, the kids were free to explore the three different peaks Sugarbush offered, the furthest peak taking over an hour to get to the top. "It took as about 45 minutes to get to the top or the peak and 30 minutes to get back down," continued Plante. Unlike Seven Springs, in Vermont there is no nightskiing due to lack of lights and cold temperatures. After a long day of skiing the club meets back up at 4:30 for their trip back to their hotel where mass games of Catch Phrase and Apples to Apples often took place. On their last night in Vermont the ski club took a tour of the Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream Factory, where they were able to try new flavors and buy souvineers.

Room 341 is home to the life skills support program at the Mt. Lebanon High School. Led by Mr. Adam Vlcek, the life skills support teacher, these students complete a variety of tasks from baking cookies to working on school assignments. Each student has an IEP, Individualized Education Plan, that addresses the specific goals of each student. This plan is created by the students and their parents. In addition to school work, 341 kids have jobs around the school including sorting and delivering mail and creating passes for the library. The students are assigned different jobs and carry-out these jobs during the school year. Mr. Vlcek works with Mrs. Shelley Tropp, a life skills classroom aide, and Mrs. Gail Hess, a personal care assistant, to teach the kids core school subjects. These subjects include math and English. Most education is completed in 341 where they learn pre-vocational skills. Some students also leave Mt. Lebanon throughout the school week to attend training programs at technical schools and support schools in order to learn the skills necessary for future occupations.

A Delegate's Lingo Survival Guide to the World of Model United Nations

Best Delegate - like first place but with a cooler name

Outstanding Delegate - second place, awarded to the delegate who didn't do as well as the first place winner but held up in committee

Honorable Mention - third place, given to the delegate who probably passed a paper and contributed but didn't lead committee.

Verbal Commendation - awarded to anyone who spoke well in committee

Working Paper - basically a rough draft of a resolution, the UN's version of a law

Delegate - someone who attempts to accurately represent a certain country

Chairs - the college students in charge of each committee; they choose the topics and moderate debate, giving awards at the end.

Gavel - a wooden hammer the Chairs use to get the committee's attention; the Best Delegate wins the gavel at the end of the conference.

A Day in the Life

7:00 a.m. A cheery Mr. Lumish wake-up call.

9:30 a.m. Eat breakfast. Then wait for the bus and get strange looks from other patrons wondering why a group of thirty teenagers dressed in business attire is standing in the lobby.

10:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. Sit in committee and debate with other delegates about a range of issues, defending your assigned country's position and calling out other delegates when they are wrong.

12:00 to 1:00 p.m. A blessing arrives in the form of a lunch break. Work on your working paper for an hour, hoping to turn it in at the beginning of the next session.

1:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. The second session of committee is the most important because most chairs make their judging decision then. Submit the working paper and introduce it. Try to answer both intelligent questions and dumb ones while still making the chairs like you. A vote is held and your paper passes with three fourths of the vote. Sigh of relief.

5:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. Dinner break arrives. Tell everyone else about the successful passing of your working paper, which you're sure would have solved the problem if you were actually part of the UN.

7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. The final session arrives and, although you're exhausted, power through and help some allies pass their paper. It's been a successful day.

Language Clubs

Many students decide to take languages at the high school, but for those who want to take their world language beyond the classroom, Mt. Lebanon offers various world language clubs. The Spanish, German, Chinese, French, Arabic and Latin language clubs all provide students with the opportunity to further explore and expand their knowledge of global languages.

Meeting after school, members all share a common love for their language. The ability to communicate in another language is a highly useful and highly rewarding skill. In a modern society where interaction between different parts of the world is becoming more and more common, those who are fluent in another language have the upper hand over those who are not. Another aspect of world language clubs that many times goes unrealized is the cultural aspect. Clubs take an in-depth look at the cultures of countries who speak their respective languages. Students are also given the opportunity to compete in various national language exams, allowing them to highlight their skill and fluency in their language.

Chinese Club

One of the world's quickest spreading languages is Chinese. With China emerging as a world power, members of the Chinese club take a look at the nuances and culture that surrounds the Chinese language

Orchestra continues to grow and succeed

"Thank you to all of the terrific and dedicated orchestra students who have brightened the lives of others through their music performances this year," said Mr. Vogel.

The Mt. Lebanon High School Orchestra is the largest student activity. The orchestra is so large, in fact, that it encompasses two separate orchestras: string orchestra and symphony orchestra, which consists of string, wind, brass and percussion players. Members of both orchestras can also audition to be in the chamber orchestra, which travelled to New York in March for a national competition. Every year, the orchestra plays a variety of musical pieces. This year, the orchestra covered pieces from several different time periods, ranging from a "Concerto Grosso" by Handel to Lord of the Rings and "An American in Paris" by Gershwin. Students learned about music theory and music history. For many, the orchestra is the only outlet they have for musical expression as part of an ensemble. For others, participation in the high school orchestra is in addition to participation in the Pittsburgh Youth Philharmonic Orchestra, the Three Rivers Young Peoples' Orchestra, the South Hills Junior Orchestra and/or the Pittsburgh Youth Symphony Orchestra.

Kevin Skolnick (12), Claire Neiderberger (12), Grace Stokan (12) and Amanda Vosburgh (9) rehearses for the competition at Carnegie Mellon called "From the Top."

Each Monday afternoon, Mt. Lebanon's finest artists convene to create their own masterpieces. Ranging from painting to pottery, each student has a story to tell with their unique creations. As Mr. Carlin gives free range to his students with their creativity, the hour long club is open to do what ever pleases, be it finishing up work from class or just stopping by to start a project. Once in a while students even get the opportunity to spin on the pottery wheel, that is if Mr. Carlin grants the prized go-ahead. Since the club welcomes non-artclass members, new faces are greeted weekly. As Mondays can prove to be quite stressful, nothing beats winding down the day with friends, making art.

FOR THE LOVE OF THE GAME

This season was a major success for the varsity and jv girls tennis teams. The varsity team was undefeated through their entire season. One season highlight was beating Shady Side Academy in the regular season.

"We were all connected and gave our very best in every serve," said varsity player Lauren West (11). Besides the regular season games, varsity also won a huge game during their Altoona match. Not only was it a great season for varsity, but the jv had a stellar season as well. Even with the brutal defeat by Upper St. Clair, the girls left the court with pride.

"It wasn't about winning or losing, it was about gaining experience and enjoying the sport," said jv player Yiming Wang (10).

TRADITION NEVER GRADUATES

After a seventh place finish in the 2010 PIAA Championships, the Lebo Cross Country roared back, returning almost all of the varsity runners and launched themselves to be favorites to win the 2011 State Championship. Under the power of seniors Lawton Tellin, Kevin Tramaglini, and nationally recognized runner Alex Moran, the varsity squad dominated almost every meet it ran in. After obliterating the competition in the first meets of the year, Mt. Lebanon lost to Cardinal O'Hara in the PIAA Foundation Cross Country Invitational, a preview of the state meet. Fueled by vengeance, Mt. Lebanon glided to victories in all their remaining regular season meets. As the postseason began, the junior varsity squad capture the TSTCA JV Championship. The varsity squad, however, saw a disappointing defeat at the hands of rival North Allegheny in the WPIAL Championship. Once again fueled by anger, Mt. Lebanon charged into the PIAA State Championship hoping to improve their performances. As a team, they ran a much faster race and finished a respectable fourth. The team persevered through the many trials and tribulations of the season under the guide of their seniors. Leaders such as Moran, Tellin, Tramaglini, and Mark Wisniewski inspired the team to be their best.

CROSS COUNTRY

WE'RE BRINGING XC BACK

The 2011 girls cross country team continued their winning streak this year, making their record 76-1 for the past ten years. Optional practices for the season began in July, and in August, mandatory two-a-days started.

Although tiring, Lauren Kaplan (12) said that "two-a-days are a bonding experience." The team held annual practice traditions, such as the smoothie run. During the smoothie run, different groups run to seniors' homes and collect fruit, and then all meet at one home after to make the drinks.

During the season, the team won all of their section meets and both junior varsity and varsity teams earned first place at the Slippery Rock Invitational.

The team earned its sixth consecutive section title, and the successful season allowed for the varsity team to continue to WPIALs. Led by Callie Gunzenhauser (10), Julie Kocjancic (11), and Jillian Hunsberger (10), the team earned second place and continued on to states. Hunsberger placed 13th at states, followed by Kocjancic in 29 and Gunzenhauser, who placed 30th. Their success at states, along with the combination of an overall great season, ended the year on a high note.

Above: Elizabeth Smith (10) and Caitlin Giron (9) outrun the competition during the Red White and Blue invitational. Cross country runners must push themselves at the finish in order to lower their times and beat other runners. The rough conditions served as a bonding experience for runners who had to deal with the tough conditions, as well as the challenge of running a race. Mud makes the course slippery and therefore much harder to run on. Regardless, the varsity girls above successfully completed their race and placed second overall.

FOOTBALL

UNFINISHED BUSINESS

Expecting another stellar season, the Mt. Lebanon football team was focused on sticking to their hardnosed tactics and strong running game. Lebo's premiere offensiveline anchored their way into the WPIAL playoffs with a 6-3 regular season record as running back Luke Hagy (12) ran for over 1,000 yards on the season, totaling for over 4,000 in his high school career, while also accounting for three receiving touchdowns and even one passing touchdown to senior receiver Dan Graziano (12). Pat Goff (12) led the team as quarterback, creating an intense arial attack, stacking up approximately 800 yards passing and eight touchdowns. Tight ends Dylan White (12) and Mark Buda (11) teamed up to haul in four touchdowns.

Defensively, the Blue Devils also put up some impressive numbers. Led by Division 1 recruit, Arthur Goldberg (12), the Blue Devils held opponents to only 15.6 points per game in the regular season. Tyler Roth led the team with three interceptions. The defense was able to put points up on the board, too. Dylan White (12) and Jack Faett (12) have each returned a interception for a touchdown.

Stand up and cheer!

Mt. Lebanon High School's cheerleading program has made major changes and improvements throughout this past season. Coaches Katy Phillips, Brittany Taylor and Leah Senneway have tried to help their squads achieve maximum potential.

Season tryouts and three-a-day practices occurred in August. For the months following the cheerleaders cheered on football, girls and boys soccer, wrestling, and girls and boys basketball. The cheerleaders volunteered themselves to cheer at other community events throughout the year.

In October, tryouts for the school's new competitive squad were held over the course of one week. Mt. Lebanon's competitive squad was the newest addition to the cheerleading program and was a success. The squad consisted of Freshman, JV and Varsity teammates. Over the year the competitive team competed six times and placed in their division each time.

Each week cheerleaders have two to four practices and up to three games but still make time for team events.

NO ONE LIKES VANILLA YOGURT

The 2011 boys soccer season was filled with excitement, competition and at times...disappointment.

The season started with three practices a day. The morning practice consisted of conditioning. The afternoon practice was devoted to skill work, and the evening practice was devoted to scrimmaging.

The hard work paid off in the regular season. The Blue Devils beat Wilson in the East West Classic. They also beat Seneca Valley and Butler, two WPIAL powerhouses. The team was plagued with six concussions during the course of the season, including bench presence Ellis Herman during the USC game.

Senior leaders included team captains PJ DiNardo, Ryan Hagenbrock, and Dimitrije Slavkovic. DiNardo, Slavkovic, and Max Basheda were named to the All-WPIAL team, and Slavkovic was also named All-State as well as Regional All-American. All-Section players included Matt Collins, Ryan Hagenbrock, Earl Graham, and Max Trezinski.

Next year's team has the difficult task of replacing 12 valuable seniors, but the future looks bright. Justin "Beibs" Abel (11) and Mathew Collins "Young MC" (10) will be expected to defend Mt. Lebanon's soccer legacy, along with Frank Jackson, the "Albatross" (10).

GIRLS SOCCER

JUST WIN BABY!

From August through October, the Mt. Lebanon Girls JV and Varsity Soccer teams worked every day to get better and give nothing less than their best each time they stepped onto the field. With a record of 15-3 entering the playoffs, the girls varsity team had a season to be proud of with many individual accomplishments. Unfortunately, the season ended earlier than anyone had hoped in a playoff game against North Allegheny.

Regardless of the scores, from team bonding in the wilderness to eating team dessert on pre-game nights, this was a season no one will forget. This year's team maintained some classic Lebo soccer traditions including singing "Ain't No Mountain High Enough" on the bus, Denny's at 5a.m. on the last Saturday of pre-season, and a feast at Olive Garden before the first day of school.

On the field, the girls have kept the tradition of "The Lean," that was around even when Assistant Coach Shelly Saba played in the 80s. They also yell out the word "brave" at the end of the National Anthem and run to the bench.

The graduation of the team's six seniors will be a difficult loss to cope with next season. Emma Pelicano's amazing saves in goal, Katharine Pryor's game winning shots, Kate Touscany's powerful clears from the defense, Johanna Platt's precise service into the goal box, Emily Mihalko's speed on the outside, and Maddie Carlos's advanced foot skills in the midfield were essential to the success of this season. These players will be greatly missed this coming season, not just for their abilities, but also for their positive attitudes and intensity that inspired their teammates.

The starting line up partakes in a classic soccer tradition. Cued by the word "free" in the National Anthem, players lean back and keep the tradition alive.

To the left, Allie Henninger (11) and Maria Fabi (11) congratulate Katharine Pryor (12) on a regular season goal.

On the right, JV head coach Melissa Eannerino and assistant coach Reilly provide their players with constructive criticism at half time.

The team spent the fall developing their skills, learning to work as a team, and having a fun time on the field.

BOYS GOLF

EYEING UP THE PRIZE

Although the varsity boys golf team just barely missed the playoffs, calling the season a failure would be incorrect. Although they did not qualify for the WPIAL tournament as a team, Pat Burnette (11) qualified for the individual tournament.

In the final match of the season, the team lost to bitter rival Upper St. Clair by just two strokes. At the end of the season, the team's wins doubled the number of losses as they finished the season an impressive 12-6.

Next season, only three players, Pat Burnette (11), Thomas Cadle (10), and Zack Brown (11), will be returning to the varsity team, as the remaining five seniors will all be graduating. On the other hand, the junior varsity team finished strong losing only to two power houses in Peters Township and Upper St. Clair. The team finished at 10-2; however, there was no WPIAL tournament for the team to compete in for playoffs.

This year's junior varsity team was young, consisting of eight freshmen and only two sophomores. The still improving golfers will only be getting better, providing for many successful Lebo Boys Golf seasons for years to come.

GIRLS GOLF

PUTTING TO VICTORY

Only 2 years ago, the girls golf team was nearly cut due to lack of members. For the 2011 season, however, the girls team was thriving with 15 players.

The girls started off their season before school even started having practices throughout the summer. Although their season only lasts a month in a half, the girls became close friends through out the season.

Callie Carver (12), said, "Everytime we go to golf, we are really good friends. They're all really nice girls."

The highlights of the season occurred both on and off the golf course. Callie Carver, Jill Virgi, Katlin Klinchock, Maggie Gannon, Lily Oppenheimer, and Caroline Byrne all qualified for individual WPIALS.

Starting this season was a new assistant coach, Missie Berteotti. As a former LGPA player and winner as well as a golf instructor, she taught from experience and helped new players.

Because golf is more laid back compared to other high school sports, the players had an easy time bonding off the green. After matches and practices, the team would enjoy dinner at Moe's. This was a good opportunity for new players to feel welcomed.

Overall, the girl's golf season was successful on and off the course.

Varsity & JV GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

#MTLVB

Tradition and Mt. Lebanon Girls Volleyball go hand in hand. This year's squad kept the tradition going both on and off the court.

After a pre-season of two-a-days, the team celebrated with the traditional picnic in Mt. Lebanon Park, devouring the always present dirt dessert. They also continued the tradition of pre-game meals at different players' houses. New traditions were added, as well. This year, the team motto became "It's in the Sauce," after a team dinner at Quaker Steak and Lube where Junior Caroline Grattan devoured 27 wings. Senior Jenny Kang also introduced iPad photography, which she took up during her recovery time from injury.

On the court, the girls won the section title. In the play-offs they made an unexpected run which sent them to the WPIAL semi-finals losing to Seneca Valley. In a true sign of dedication, the girls competed in the North Allegheny Tournament on the same day as the Homecoming Dance, finishing fourth.

As usual, the awards for the team were plentiful. Seniors Laura and Caroline Dadowski were named to the WPIAL first team and outside attacker Caroline Grattan (11) was named to the second team. Middle hitter Jenny Kang (12) was named to the third team.

Varsity & JV

Despite not having a winning season, the girls field hockey team became closer than ever this year. All players on this team came together over a difficult two week pre-season, where they practiced twice a day on the hot turf. This year's seniors worked hard to establish this sport's importance known in the school. Senior forward Elizabeth Kelly was chosen as a WPIAL ALL-Star player as well as jounior Korey Smith. Senior defensman Sarah Schneck and senior goalie Kirsten Rambo also recieved honorable mentions on behalf of the WIPIAL ALL-Star team. The underclassmen have plenty of talent to keep building the program. Juniors Korey Smith, Alyssa Lazarchick, and Bria Rebisa were starters and will be team leaders next season. Sophomores Christine Agnoli and Mackenzie Franklin were the youngest members on the varsity squad and have great potential to improve the future program.

Every summer, during the first two weeks of August, the residents living near the high school can always hear music echoing through the neighborhood from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. The band practices long hours on the parking lot of the high school through the heat, rain and sometimes even snow (depending on the success of the football team) to learn and perfect that halftime show that is performed at every football game. Marching band is a great activity for incoming freshmen to become involved in because it helps them easily integrate into the high school and allows them forge friendships with the upperclassmen. The band attends every football game and performs at the spirit assemblies and several different parades. They also have a yearly band trip which can range from locations such as Disney World to Chicago to Kentucky.

Things to Remember for Marching Band:

- Parade rest is a form of attention.
- We don't do that here anymore.
- Pants are optional.
- Don't miss the step off. Ever.
- I'm a star!
- This piece has too many sharps in it.
- Sit down!

And most importantly:
When enjoying a day with friends at Kennywood Park, do not, under any circumstances, eat too many funnel cakes.

Rockettes and Color Guard channel the beat

Every Friday during football season, the Rockettes brave the unpredictable weather to perform during half time. There is more to the rockettes season than just performing during the games. Some of the most memorable moments for rockettes happen during the last two weeks of summer during band camp. Captain Jane Witt (12) said band camp was a lot of hard work, but it also gives a chance for the girls to get to know each other. "You make great friends," said Witt, "you all feel like you're working to a common goal." During band camp, they had different theme days where their whole section would dress up. Along with performing at football games, the rockettes also perform during the band trip and parade during the spring. They also held team sleepovers. Overall, Witt said rockettes is a great opportunity to make friends and be involved at the high school: "We're like one big family. It's like a home away from home."

Rockette and color guard seniors, Sam Booth (12), Holly Werry (12), Michal Cohen (12), Megan Flaherty (12), Kayleigh Ramaley (12), Brita Thompson (12), Lyndsey Morrison (12), Jane Witt (12), Erin Netoskie (12), all pose for a shot before a performance. When the winter guard season starts in October, Erin Netoskie (12) said that it's a lot of hard work. The guard faced its toughest competition when they traveled to New York and Ohio. In New York, guard competed against teams from across the country and teams from Canada. They placed second overall in New York and also placed first in several local competitions. Netoskie said that doing well in competitions was on of the highlights of the season. "They show how hard we've worked and how our work has paid off," said Netoskie. After local competitions, the team went to Eatin Park to celebrate. The tradition started the previous year and hopefully will continue on to future generations. Winter Guard created friendships that will last far past high school. Netoskie said, "We're like our own little family."

CREW

2011-2012

Mt. Lebanon's crew team may not be as well-known as its football and basketball teams, but its presence is felt far beyond the borders of the community. The rowers practice on Pittsburgh's Allegheny River and train hard to compete on the water. This year, the team's number of participants fell, but the overall amount of motivation and love for the sport only increased with each competition. Among other perks of participating—including insane upper-arm strength—is the sense of family felt between team members. The crew team spends so much time together throughout the year that forming lifelong friendships is inevitable.

FRESHMEN, JUNIOR VARSITY AND VARSITY Boys Basketball

In 2011-2012, the Blue Devils hoped to continue the tradition of success after reaching the state final the previous year. After beginning the season 4-4, the Blue Devils rattled off 11 straight victories and entered the playoffs as the number 3 seed. With a loss in the first round of the WPIAL playoffs, the season concluded all too soon. However, the Blue Devils amassed a final record of 17-6 and were runner-ups in the section. The season will be remembered for both its success on the court and the friendships developed off of the floor. A highlight of the season, the trip to Miami, allowed the team to bond, play some quality opponents, and of course hit the beach. Kamik Anyang (12), a newcomer from Michigan who brought swag as well as a nice jumper to Lebo, provided entertainment as he dueled a resident of the Community Rehabilitation Center in a dance-off. There, the team volunteered at a life-skills center which caters towards individuals with mental handicaps. Along with the trip to Miami, team dinners were among the favorite memories of the team. Those team gatherings helped foster a bond amongst the team that was evident to the dedicated Lebo fans who witnessed the camaraderie on the court. Aside from the buffet-style dinners, for Dylan White (12) and Luke Hagy (12), the highlight of the season was the home USC game. With the devil's den decked out in superhero attire, an atmosphere expected of any USC-Lebo game, and a win on senior night, the evening capped an unforgettable season.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

WPIAL CHAMPS

Looking to defend their third consecutive state title, the Mt. Lebanon Girl's Basketball team returned a talented group of seniors for the 2011-2012 season. Led by guards Liz Tommasi and Kelly Johnson as well as forward Emma Pellicano, the battle-tested senior class certainly continued the tradition of excellence. After compiling a 25-4 record, a fourth consecutive section championship, and winning their third WPIAL championship in four years, this senior class will perhaps go down as the most decorated in school history. Though the season ended in the quarterfinals of the state tournament, a novelty for these seniors, with a loss to Oakland Catholic, the Blue Devils bested the Eagles in the WPIAL championship just two weeks before winning in a thriller 58-49. Of course, not only the seniors made the season special. Meshing with the upperclassmen, the younger players on the team developed a unique bond with the veterans on the squad, a bond that characterized the selflessness of this year's Blue Devils. That bond was developed through countless hours in the gym and of course all the fun times off of the court. All in all, it was a successful season that lived up to and cemented the rich tradition of Mt. Lebanon girl's basketball.

SWIMMING AND DIVING

"GET SOME!"

The common trend of the 2011-2012 swimming and diving season was surpassing expectations. From the number of people on the diving roster to which events qualified for states, the team atmosphere was defined by pleasant surprises and the results of hard work.

In a team that has historically lacked divers, this year's team grew to include six divers. They had a positive impact on the cohesive team atmosphere and the team points. They acted as key components in the success of the teams.

In terms of swimming, both teams achieved 7-4 records and worked together to have a strong showing at dual meets, WPIALs, and states. For the first time since 2002, all three girls' relays qualified for states. Best times and personal victories were enjoyed by nearly every swimmer throughout the season.

Beyond that, the swimmers built a connected team atmosphere and enjoyed team dinners and outings to Eat n Park after meets. Despite the fact that roughly half of the swimmers spend all year together on the club team, while the other half swims seasonally, this year's group bonded to form a truly cohesive unit.

Kobik (12) and Nik Victor (10) model formal attire as they carry their dinners into up on the days of away meets. Because meets start at 6:00 or 6:30, and the team early dinners on the bleachers right after school and congregate there until the

TAKE DOWN

Mt. Lebanon varsity wrestling, lead by coach Bill Lewis have faced something this year that has been unusual for them in the past. As a team, they produced wrestlers in 14 different weight classes, and had ten freshmen starting for the team. Although these stats may appear insignificant, this is more freshmen wrestlers than Lewis has had in 11 years of head coaching experience. The freshman outnumber the senior captains this year. With only three seniors on the wrestling team, the under classmen outnumber the more experienced wrestlers. The team starts conditioning during the fall and continues its regular season during the winter. The 2012 team finished with a record of 8-10.

EYES ON THE PRIZE

Coming into the 2011-2012 season, the varsity hockey team was looking to improve from their losing record from the prior season. Right away, they jumped out to a 5-0 start, highlighted with a 7-0 win in State College in front of over 850 students.

This year, they were set to come into every game and outwork, out hustle and out play every team. For the playoffs, everyone made the sacrifice and bleached their hair to show that we were all in it together. According to the players, the team this year seemed to be more unified than past teams that they had been on. It was an incredible experience for everyone involved with the team and it went beyond the rink.

This year, we were more than just a team, we were a family. This team was willing to go to the extra degree and put everything on the line for every game they played. Although they finished the season with a 15-6-1 record and fell short of the Penguins Cup, this season was incredible and it was one that none of the players will ever forget.

RIFLE

TAKING AIM

As the oldest varsity sport at Mt. Lebanon High School with the only co-ed sports events, rifle is a unique sport that most people underestimate. Those that shoot on this team have to hit a bulls-eye smaller than a pencil's eraser from 50 ft. away ten times in a row while lying down. Think it sounds easy? That's not all you have to do to succeed. Members of this team, both boys and girls alike, have to learn to shoot between heartbeats and breaths, lower their intake of sugar and salts throughout the day, and learn to keep their body as still as possible, for any movement will result in shooting a target that typically will not qualify in any match. Rifle is called the 'mental' sport for a reason. If you doubt yourself for even a second while shooting, you are guaranteed to miss the shot.

Left: Allison Tarbert (12) shoots on position 1, the position that lefties typically shoot on Captain Quinn LaDuke (12) smiles before she begins shooting in the prone position.

Freshmen take on leadership positions

One of the best ways to take on an active role in high school is to get involved in class council. Freshmen class council meets once a week to brainstorm fundraising ideas and discuss upcoming events. This year their goal was to raise $1,000 to be used for future events. One way they earned money was through raffling off Penguin tickets. This year's freshmen class has two co-presidents, three vice presidents, one treasurer and one secretary. With this level of involvement, the future looks bright for the class of 2015.

What fears did you have coming to the high school?

"My biggest fear was getting lost or not being able to find my classes."
- Lauren Lowen (9)

"My fear was getting thrown in to a locker."
- Jake Zoffer (9)

"Having no one to sit with at lunch."
- Ruth Oshlag (9)

While freshmen teams like soccer, baseball, basketball and football may not receive the roaring crowds or glory of JV and varsity, their heart and commitment will prove beneficial for years to come. The freshmen are known to get the youngest coaches, smallest equipment and latest gym hours, but these youngsters have extraordinary potential that they cannot wait to display on the larger stage of varsity. Their dedication supports the character building that takes place throughout each freshmen season. As for this season, freshman teams like football and soccer (below) focus on carrying on the tradition of a strong, winning season.

Freshmen shawties show shoe swag

A group of ninth grade girls model the latest shoe fashions. The new shoe trend involved wearing moccasins, which had been spotted in the hallways along side Sperrys and the ever-present Uggs. Suprisingly, Uggs have been a trend in the high school since the late 2000s despite the fear that they would never remain in style.

Freshmen Tebow the time away

Tim Tebow, the controversial quarterback for the Denver Broncos, officially became a pop icon when his pre-game prayer was immortalized in the English lexicon. "Tebowing" was officially declared a word in late 2011. Tebowing is when you look as if you are taking a moment of reflection even when the rest of the world is busy with their everyday lives. A group of freshmen boys demonstrate a modified Tebow during sixth period lunch. Charlie Cappucci (9) demonstrates a full blown Tebow during lunch. Other poses that became popular this year include owling and planking. Tebowing, owling and planking have infiltrated the internet, where people can be found posing in unusual places all over the globe.

Lunchtime: a much-needed break in a sophomore's day

From rowdy paper football games to hurried recaps of last night's English assignment, lunchtime tends to end all too quickly for the average sophomore. Most tenth graders congregate in the fifth floor cafeteria, where tables quickly fill up during periods 4, 5 and 6 with students exhausted from busy mornings. The year is peppered with the occasional exciting lunchtime moment – perhaps a brief loud argument or a carefully planned public Homecoming proposal – but ultimately, the real value of lunchtime is the opportunity to reconnect and catch up with nary-seen friends.

K'Dama-nation: Fad stays alive

Juniors Tyer White (above) and Chris Pham (left) work to master the Kendama in the hallways during study hall. The Kendama which was popular 2008-2009 reemerged this year as a way to pass time and drive teachers crazy.

Juniors "Make Like a Turkey"

This year, a group of junior girls hoped to fulfill a time-honored tradition and "make like a turkey" in aiming to knock off the senior group. The team consisted of 18 girls, all sporting shirts proclaiming that they intended to "make like a turkey." They had the help of junior boys, who served as the "coaches" of the team. It was a cold, muddy day at Jefferson Middle School, and the girls fought hard the whole game. The game ended in a 21-21 tie; however, the juniors were left waiting for victory another year.

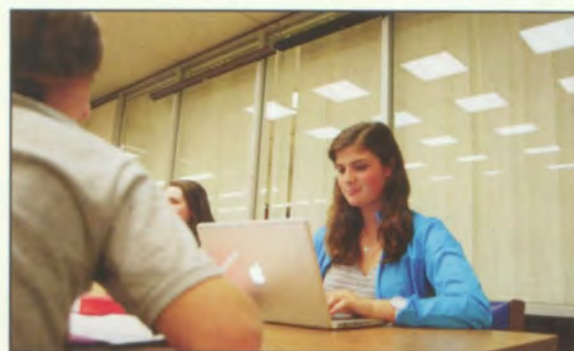

On right, some of the coaching staff for the junior team including Christian Horta-Kovacs, Trevor Nelson, Ian Averborg-Johnson. Both Horta-Kovacs and Averborg-Johnson used their personal knowledge of the game to lead the team to victory.

Bring Your Own Technology Comes To Lebo

One of the most interesting changes to occur this year was the addition of the Bring Your Own Tech policy. Students are allowed to bring their own technology and use it during lunches and study halls. The new policy was wildly popular and utilized by many students.

MICHAEL PARKER PHILLIPS

UNTITLED
BY MICHAEL PHILLIPS

THIS IMAGE WAS GENERATED BY A COMPUTER CODE WRITTEN BY MICHAEL. THE IMAGE IS PART OF WHAT IS CALLED THE MANDELBROT SET. THIS IS A SET OF POINTS THAT TAKE THE SHAPE OF A "FRACTAL." NO MATTER HOW FAR YOU ZOOM IN, IT STILL HAS THE SAME INTRICATE PATTERN. MICHAEL'S CODE ASSIGNS A COLOR TO EACH POINT IN A COMPLEX CARTESIAN PLANE BASED ON HOW LONG YOU CAN REPEAT A CERTAIN OPERATION WITHOUT GOING OUTSIDE OF A SPECIFIED VALUE. THE MANDELBROT SET IS A SET OF COMPLEX NUMBERS. A COMPLEX NUMBER IS A NUMBER  $x + iy$ , WHERE  $iy$  IS AN IMAGINARY NUMBER, AND CAN BE VIEWED AS A POINT  $(x,y)$  ON THE "COMPLEX PLANE."

IN YEARBOOKS PAST...

Messages scrawled in '06, '07 and '08 yearbooks of Jefferson and Mellon Middle Schools bring back some silly, sentimental and sometimes surprising memories.

Gabby Sherman sketched elaborate dragons in several of her classmates' yearbooks.

In seventh grade, Jake Berntsen and Kyle Smith created a "how-to" video for English class, during which the boys videotaped their attempt to both make chicken noodle soup and perform a dance to DJ Webstar's "Chicken Noodle Soup." On the last day of school, Jake signed yearbooks, such as the one above, with references to their famed project.

"I didn't really take it seriously," Lawton Tellin said of signing middle school yearbooks. He was unfailingly devoted, though, to maintaining a level of creativity: "I don't think I ever just signed my name."

"Chicken noodle soup was the best," Jake said, reflecting on his yearbook message. "Chicken noodle soup still is the best."

How do you keep your hair looking good?

Best Hair

Claire: "It's all natural!"

James: "Do your best. Brush it good."

Claire Niederberger and James Kim

Voted "Best Hair" by their classmates in the eighth grade yearbook, Claire Niederberger and James Kim accepted the award with some sound advice. Below, Claire shows that four years later, her hair is still looking good.

Lauren Kaplan and Megan Henney are "neighbors, so we've been friends since kindergarten," Lauren said. They attended elementary and middle school together and have remained close throughout the four years of high school.

Lauren said she wasn't surprised she wrote a more extensive message in Megan's eighth grade yearbook, adding, "She still does rock my socks!"

Megan,
Oh my gosh! We have been in this school for 9 years. We've probably been here more than our houses! Wow we've had so many good times! Elementary school seems like ages ago! I can't believe we're going to high school!
You rock my socks!

WORLD YEARBOOK

H

2011 thru 2012...

#TOPHASHTAGS #EGYPT / #THREWORDSTOLIVEBY / #SUPERBOWL / #JAPAN / #IDONTUNDERSTANDWHY

WAVES OF CHANGE Former Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who had been in power since 1981, was ousted in 2011. He was later put on trial for allegedly ordering the killing of protesters. EGYPTIAN PROTESTERS Waving their national flag and shouting slogans, thousands crowded Cairo's Tahrir Square to demand political change as anger grows with the military rulers over the slow pace of reform. TOGETHER IN PROTEST The flags of Syria, Tunisia, Yemen, Egypt and Libya were painted on participants' palms during a demonstration in Yemen.

ARAB SPRING

PROTESTS ACROSS THE MIDDLE EAST brought changes to Arab nations large and small. Uprisings began in Tunisia, where, as 2010 ended, a young vendor protesting the confiscation of his wares set himself on fire. Discontent spread to Egypt and Yemen as 2011 began, and in the months that followed those governments and leaders from Bahrain, Libya and Syria were under siege. By year's end, the presidents of Tunisia, Egypt and Yemen had stepped down and Libya's Moammar Gadhafi and his son Mutassim had been assassinated. Tunisians went to the polls in October 2011 and the Egyptian election took place just a month later. The protests continued despite high costs: thousands of lives (5,000 in Syria alone) and billions of dollars were lost.

AMID DISASTER & DEVASTATION... HOPE

CATASTROPHIC DESTRUCTION

THE MOST POWERFUL EARTHQUAKE ever to hit Japan was an undersea megathrust in March 2011. The 9.0 temblor, which lasted nearly five minutes, caused tsunamis that flooded cities more than five miles inland and sent tidal waves crashing to the United States. In addition to local damage done by the earthquake and accompanying tsunami, the event crippled three Fukushima nuclear reactors, releasing dangerous levels of radiation.

PRAYER CANDLES Showing support for earthquake and tsunami victims, survivors and aid workers lit up the night. Records showed 15,844 confirmed dead and 3,450 listed as missing since the March disaster. Damage was estimated at $217.7 billion.

FALLING MARS ROCKS Meteorites from Mars fell in Morocco in July, delighting scientists who for years have feared their samples had been tainted with "Earth materials."

PANDAS TO PARIS After a decade of negotiations and a 5,000-mile flight, a pair of Chinese pandas flew to France, where they'll take up residence in the zoo at Beauval.

CANCER VACCINE In January, a Buffalo, NY lab announced the development of a vaccine which they believe will "eradicate cancer cells and prevent disease relapse."
